Moro Trail Turns Cold

ROME (AP) — Searchers for the body of former premier Aldo Moro dynamited the icy cover of Lake Duchessa and drained a quarry today but found no trace of the kidnapped political leader. Speculation grew that the Red Brigades' announcement of his "execution" was a ruse.

Divers, trained mountain dogs and hundreds of others continued searching in and around the snowbound lake 115 kilometres northeast of Rome, where a communique received Tuesday said the body would be found.

Experts said the message appeared to have been written by the terrorists who grabbed Moro March 16 and killed his five bodyguards. But no trace of the body was found, leading officials to speculate that the communique was a trick to take police away from the hunt for the kidnappers or a hoax to further the terrorists' psychological warfare against the "bourgeois" state.

The search was widened under floodlights during the night to a flooded stone quarry beside a highway 10 kilometres from the lake. Investigators said the metal fence between the road and the quarry had been cut, and there were signs of automobile tire tracks on the ground. However, the search turned up nothing.

Doubt of the message's authenticity also was cast when the Milan newspaper Corriere della Sera quoted a lawyer for Red Brigades leaders being tried in Turin as saying they "do not recognize the style of the Red Brigades in the message."

PRESTO: SEATS FILLED

Debate dragged on in the legislature Tuesday night before the near-empty rows of government and opposition benches — until a television cameraman began setting up his equipment.

First to return to the chamber was Premier Bill Bennett, quickly followed by three cabinet ministers.

All except eight of the government's 35 members were in their chairs when the filming by BCTV began, and many quickly vacated their posts once the cameraman packed up.

Also absent were eight of the 18 NDP members and the sole Liberal and Conservative members.

FRANCE WON'T COMMENT

Neutron Bomb Test

PARIS (UPI) — France has exploded a neutron bomb in the Pacific in a top-secret test of the controversial weapon, the newspaper France Soir and the magazine Le Point reported today.

French military experts said they believed it was the first time a neutron bomb had been set off anywhere.

"France has exploded its first neutron bomb," France Soir said in a banner headline.

"In the greatest of secrecy and on an experimental basis in the Pacific, France has exploded its first neutron bomb," the newspaper said.

The French defence ministry said it would neither confirm nor deny the report. A spokesmen said government policy was not to discuss publicly France's test plans and progress on perfecting the nation's nuclear weapons program.

"France has experimented a neutron bomb in the Pacific ... France has completed with its own means its research on the neutron bomb," France Soir said.

It said it would take three or four years to make the bomb "operational."

Le Point, considered a reliable French news magazine, said that "France has just made a test of the bomb."

The state-owned radio France-Inter carried the France Soir report and the Paris daily Le Figaro cited unconfirmed reports that a neutron bomb had been tested off the Mururoa atoll, at the French nuclear testing center in the Pacific.

France-Soir said a high-ranking army officer described the neutron bomb explosion as "a full scale laboratory test." It said French military experts are working on adapting the bomb to an automatic 155 canon.

In Washington the Pentagon at first declined comment on whether the United States had previously set off a neutron warhead. But a Pentagon spokesman said later: "It is very reasonable to assume that if the president was considering a production decision on enhanced radiation (neutron) weapons, that such testing should have taken place to some degree."

Sources at the Nevada Nuclear Test Site, however, said last year that at least two neutron bombs had been exploded in underground tests at the desert site during the last several years. Federal officials did not deny the report. Barring accidental "vents," such underground tests do not release radiation into the atmosphere.

A U.S.State Department spokesman said the department had no information on the reported French explosion.

The report of the test came only weeks after President Carter made a controversial decision to delay production of a neutron warhead, which kills by massive radiation but leaves buildings largely intact.

Carter demanded that the Soviet Union make similar moves to cool the international arms race.

The neutron warhead, designed chiefly to be mounted on short and intermediate range rockets, was being developed to destroy enemy troop concentrations and tanks. Russia and the Warsaw Pact nations have massed forces in Europe which greatly outnumber those of the NATO allies.

The French military experts said that if President Valery Giscard d'Estaing decides to go ahead with the production of the weapon,

Panama Treaties Passed

PANAMA CITY (AP) — Cheering in the streets of Panama City, jubilation in the White House, and relief in the U.S. Senate greeted final approval of the Panama canal treaties.

But there were predictions in Washington that the controversy and debate will continue as the House of Representatives considers legislation to implement the treaties, which gradually give Panama control of the canal during the next 22 years and which guarantee the waterway's continued neutrality thereafter.

Speaking on television, Gen. Omar Torrijos, Panama's chief-of-state, said he had been prepared to resort to violence if the second treaty had been defeated. To submit the issue to new negotiations with the United States, he said, "would mean shame, the negation of sovereignty."

Torrijos told a news conference that if the Senate had not ratified the treaty, "we were going to take the route of violent liberation."

"By tommorrow the canal would not have been in operation," he said.

But Torrijos obviously was relieved and elated at the Senate's 68-to-32 approval of the second pact Tuesday.

"This treaty ends colonialism," he said. "I feel proud that I accomplished our mission. The ratification of the Senate buries the treaty that was imposed on us in 1903 and from the body has emerged a new treaty based on mutual respect."

The package's approval, they said, was a retreat from national greatness and ignored the fervent wishes of the great majority of U.S. citizens.

But President Carter said he is convinced Americans eventually will accept the treaties as being in "the best interest of our nation."

"These treaties can mark the beginning of a new era in our relations, not only with Panama, but with all the rest of the world," Carter said.

U.S. DOLLAR RISE SLOWS

Times News Services

The U.S. dollar's four-day rise lost some of its momentum today as profit-taking set in on European markets, but the U.S. currency still made slight gains at the start of trading.

In London, the British pound was almost unchanged at $1.8445 U.S. this morning. Tuesday night's close was $1.84435.

Tel to Cut Extra Tax

B.C. Tel Tuesday announced it will rebate excess sales tax charged customers in the March 15 to April 15 billing period.

A spokesman for the company said the rebate is at the direction of the provincial government but will involve only a small amount of money, about 10 cents.

The company's computer was programmed to charge a full seven per cent sales tax for the March 15 to April 15 period, although the tax fell to five per cent on April 11.

YOU CAN'T blame a boy for being just a bit worried when someone — even when that someone's a big, friendly Victoria policeman like Const. Al Cave — starts fiddling around with his bike. Young Jeremy Gordaneer kept close eye on his prized possession as Cave marked and registered his bike at Sir James Douglas school. Registration program aimed at cutting bike thefts in Greater Victoria area, is now underway in city and Saanich schools. (John McKay photo)

Daoud Held To Assure Ceasefire

BEIRUT (AP) — Guerrilla leader Yasser Arafat has arrested 130 followers of Abu Daoud, suspected mastermind of the Munich Olympics massacre, to ensure a moratorium on military operations against Israeli forces in southern Lebanon, reliable Palestinian sources said today.

They said the battlefield crackdown occurred a few hours after Arafat made the moratorium pledge to UN Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim during their 70-minute meeting in Beirut Monday.

The detainees belong to a hardline wing led by Daoud in Arafat's own guerrilla group, Al Fatah, and they attempted to defy the moratorium, the sources said.

The arrests are of a temporary nature and the detainees will be freed once they are removed from the southern front, the sources said.

The withdrawal of Israeli forces may be speeded up as a result of efforts by Waldheim to increase the size of the international force there, Israeli radio said.

Waldheim said during a visit to the UNIFIL Tuesday that he hopes to be able to increase the size of the force to 6,000 men from 4,000 because of the larger area to be guarded.

Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin has told him that while Israel is eager to withdraw from the area, it is important not to leave a vacuum that might be filled by returning Palestinian guerrillas.

In Jerusalem, parliament today overwhelmingly elected as Israel's fifth president opposition Labor Party member Yitzhak Navon, an outspoken dove who favors talks with the Palestinians.

Rhodesian Guerrillas Protest

DAR ES SALAAM (Reuter) — Britain and the United States were accused Tuesday of playing down positive results of negotiations here during the weekend with black Rhodesian guerrilla leaders.

A senior Tanzanian government source said U.S. State Secretary Cyrus Vance and British Foreign Secretary David Owen have emphasized points of disagreement despite concessions by the black nationalists.

"The British and Americans let us down," he said. "They were not really prepared for agreement here."

The two Western envoys conferred with Robert Mugabe and Doshua Nkomo, leaders of the militant Patriotic Front which has waged a six-year bush war against Prime Minister Ian Smith's regime in Rhodesia.

'Average' Taxpayers Helped in Que. Budget

QUEBEC (CP) — Finance Minister Jacques Parizeau brought down a $13-billion budget Tuesday, placing the emphasis squarely on tax cuts designed to redistribute wealth in keeping with the two-year-old Parti Quebecois government's commitment to social democracy.

Some 2.2. million Quebecers will share in a $313-million cut in income taxes designed to help low- and middle-income wage earners. But taxpayers in higher brackets will bear an additional burden in the 1978-79 fiscal year.

The "average" Quebec taxpayer described by Parizeau—a married man earning the province's average industrial wage of $13,700 a year—will see his tax bill drop $291 this year as a result of new exemptions which take affect immediately.

Single Quebecers who earn less than $22,000 a year and married people who earn less than $30,000 will all benefit to varying degrees, while payments will rise for taxpayers above those levels.

Parizeau also announced $48 million in new taxes on tobacco, raising the price of a large package of cigarettes by seven cents, and $18 million in penalty taxes on non-returnable bottles and cans, amounting to five cents on containers of less than 16 ounces, 10 cents on larger containers.

Parizeau had earlier announced elimination of the eight-per-cent tax on hotel rooms and some hotel meals, as well as a one-year elimination of the eight-per-cent sales tax on textiles, clothing, footwear and furniture, Quebec's weaker industries.

World Jobless Soaring to 800M

WASHINGTON (AP) — More than 800 million people will join an exploding world labor force by the year 2000, challenging nations to create enough jobs to avert massive unemployment by the end of this century, a research organization reported Tuesday.

Population Reference Bureau Inc. said more than one billion jobs will be needed in the next 22 years to provide employment for the estimated 300 million to 500 million people already unemployed as well as those that will enter the labor market.

In its just-released annual study on world population trends, the non-profit organization estimated that the world's labor force will grow from 1.7 billion people in 1978 to 2.5 billion in 2000.

As a result of record population growth in the last two decades, people in many countries are entering the job market faster than the economy can absorb them, said Thomas Kane, the bureau's research demographer.

"This trend is increasing, and by the year 2000, at least 800 million more people will be looking for work," he said.

Unemployment in industrialized nations now stands at 17 million, it is estimated, while in the developing world it is more than 300 million.

"The pressures contributing to the world's population explosion eased slightly as a result of the declining world birth rate of the 1970s," Kane said.

"Nonetheless, in coming years humanity must still brace itself for another explosion—that of its labor force."

He added that the world "must create over a billion new jobs if massive, world-wide unemployment is to be avoided by the end of this century."

The bureau's 1978 world population data sheet also reports that the world's population has grown by 73 million persons since mid-1977 to an estimated 1.22 billion in mid-1978.

CROWFOOT GRITS SELECT HORNER

STETTLER, Alta. (CP) — Trade Minister Jack Horner, a Progressive Conservative MP for 19 years before his defection to the Liberals a year ago, won the federal Liberal nomination for the riding of Crowfoot Tuesday.

Results were not released, but returning officer Bob Willis said a "very heavy majority" of the 1,032 voting delegates supported Horner in his fight against late-entry Jim Smith, 30, an area high school teacher.

Horner, sole Liberal MP in Alberta, will contest the riding against Progressive Conservative MP Arnold Malone, whose Battle River constituency became part of Crowfoot under redistribution.

QUESTIONABLE QUESTIONNAIRE

A planner's questionnaire designed to help Saanich aldermen decide how they would like the municipality's community plan to be prepared had a somewhat different impact Tuesday night on one alderman.

"It reminds me a lot of the income tax form," confessed Ald. Robert Cameron at a meeting of council's lands, planning and housing committee.

"Is the present form of the Official Community Plan generally acceptable? If no, see No. 5. If yes, see No. 3."

Despite his quip, however, Cameron said the questionnaire reveals the months of frustration planning staff have endured trying to come to grips with the problems posed in drafting a document which will prove widely acceptable.

For the umpteenth time, aldermen argued inconclusively about the best way of proceeding with the task, and specifically whether the preparation of individual neighborhood plans should be done in concert with the drafting of the over-all plan.

But only two decisions were actually reached: To call a special committee meeting so that the whole subject can be thrashed out in detail, and — once the plan is completed and adopted by the Capital Region Board — to dispense with the formality of registering it with the provincial cabinet.

Committee members were told that the latter step is no longer required in order to make community plans official.

July Vote Urged

OTTAWA (TNS) — Prime Minister Trudeau is now being urged by his back-room election strategists to go to the country July 10 rather than have a mid-June election.

But members of the Liberal caucus meeting Wednesday continue to favor June 19 as polling day. They want to get the election called as soon as possible and get going on the campaign.

Anti-Fencing 'Sting' Nets $42m

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — U.S. federal and local authorities Tuesday announced the arrest of 256 persons and recovery of property and contraband worth $42 million "in the most successful anti-fencing operation in the nation's history."

A dozen of those arrested were believed to be organized crime figures from outside the area, according to authorities who worked undercover at seven phony store fronts in the metropolitan Los Angeles area during the past 22 months.

The Justice Department's Law Enforcement Assistance Administration said the $42 million recovery was the largest of 47 operations — nicknamed "stings" — that the LEAA has financed in 35 cities during the past three years.

Those arrested face both local and federal charges for receiving stolen property and interstate transportation of stolen property. Other arrests stemming from the investigation were for robbery, grand theft and sale of narcotics.

"We think we have injected one monstrous note of uncertainty into everyone who engages in the fencing business," said Sheriff Peter Pitchess. "To keep them nervous, we should add that we expect the arrest figures to rise to close to 300."

The Los Angeles sting, dubbed "Operation Tarpit," was set up in July 1, 1976, under a $450,000 federal grant. The money was used to set up phony store fronts, apartments and warehouses equipped with microphones and cameras to get evidence against crimnal customers.

Thirty three FBI agents and sheriff's deputies posed as underworld fences to purchase stolen cars, jewelry, guns, liquor, airline tickets, movies, painted lead bars passed off as platinum, drugs and other property.

Authorities said the 46 other "stings" conducted across the nation netted $74 million in stolen property and the arrest of 20 top organized crime figures.

An 18-year-old Saanich woman escaped with only minor injuries after being thrown of her motorcycle on to the hood of a car in a collision in downtown Victoria Tuesday afternoon.

Janice Campbell of 4245 Lynnfield was treated at Victoria General Hospital for cuts and bruises to her leg and later released.

The collision occurred at Blanshard and Fairfield.

Unusual Find In Malaysia

KUALA LUMPUR (AP) — The Malaysian national museum has unearthed an eight-sided Hindu-Buddhist structure of the sixth to 13th centuries in the Bujang Valley of Kedah state, curator Adi Ben Taha reported.

Taha said the find was unusual because, except for a 12-sided structure found 12 years ago, all others found were rectangular. He said the structure might have been used as a temple or for royal ceremonies.

French Neutron Test Off Pacific Atoll?

Europe would no longer be dependent on the American nuclear umbrella and France would become Europe's most powerful nation militarily.

It would also enhance Giscard's position when he goes to New York next month to address the United Nations and advance proposals for global disarmament, they said.

Defence ministers from seven nations belonging to the NATO Nuclear Planning Group — of which France is not a member — Tuesday opened a two-day meeting in Fredrikshaven, Denmark, to discuss, among other issues, the neutron bomb.

A conference spokesman said that the bomb was being discussed informally as "one of the alternatives in the strategic arms sphere."

Another called it a possible "point of pressure on the Warsaw pact countries to get them to reduce their nuclear holdings."

Locks Picked

OTTAWA (CP) — The RCMP picked locks to "look around" more than 400 premises since 1970, a royal commission into RCMP wrongdoing was told Tuesday.

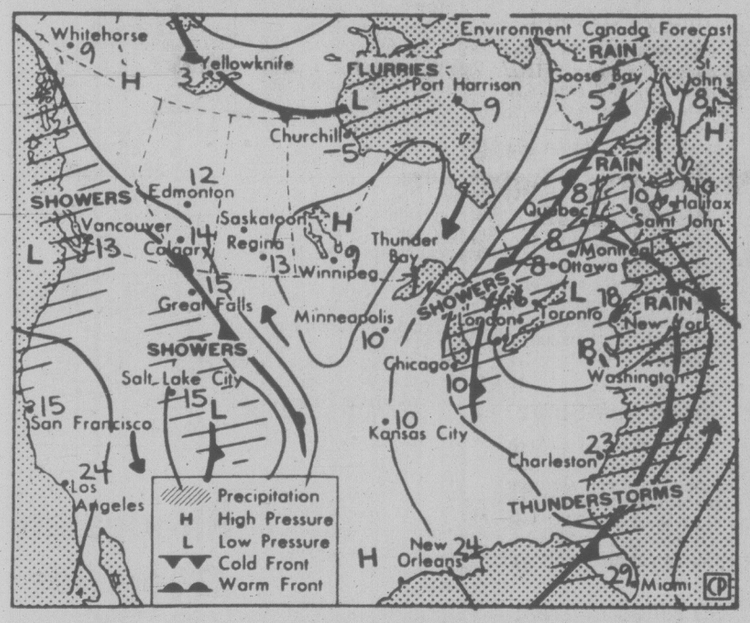

"The intelligence seeker was aware that he could find himself charged with an offence of break and entry," Assistant Commissioner T. S. Venner, director of RCMP criminal operations, testified.

Venner said warrants weren't sought in such cases because there wasn't "reasonable and probable grounds" to believe evidence of a crime would be found.

Fort Nelson Link Of BCR to Stay?

Premier Bill Bennett gave some hints Tuesday that his government will keep open the Fort Nelson extension of the British Columbia Railway but he made no promises.

A royal commission examining the Crown-owned railway recommended last week that the 400-kilometre extension in northeastern B.C. should be shut down immediately to save $60 million to $70 million in upgrading costs during the next five years.

The Social Credit government says the report needs more study while the NDP says an immediate decision is needed to end the uncertainty.

Bennett told the legislature he is enthusiastic about the future of the extension, but refused to say for certain whether it will remain open. A re-evaluation of the commission's evidence was needed.

The premier also said government policies augured well for the future of the line, contrary to the regressive development policies of the NDP government from 1972 to 1975.

Alex Macdonald (NDP — Vancouver-East) later accused the premier of deliberately "falsifying the records of history."

Bennett said that a prime reason for the existence of the line, built by the former Social Credit government prior to the NDP's term, was that it would one day be part of a transportation network, working in conjunction with a highway to the Northwest Territories — the Liard Highway.

He criticized the NDP for allowing the highway development to fall through but said his government restarted the project.

Bennett attacked NDP leader Dave Barrett for having a shocking ignorance about where the line was going and what it was set out to do. He read an excerpt from the Hansard record of Monday's proceedings, and said Barrett thought the extension would eventually link up with the Yukon and Alaska.

In fact, the premier said, the extension could provide a link to the Northwest Territories; the Dease Lake extension could provide the link to the Yukon.

The premier also accused Barrett of never meeting with any Alaska officials to talk about northern development.

Barrett said the remarks attributed to him were made by Norm Levi (NDP — Vancouver-Burrard). Because of that "the rest of the argument is therefore false."

A check of the Hansard record shows Barrett was correct. Bennett later said it was just "one of those errors."

Macdonald said, however, that there were additional major errors in Bennett's speech. He said the premier's statement that the railway development was linked to the Liard Highway was unfounded.

"If that was the case, why didn't the commission mention it?" Macdonald asked.

The former attorney-general quoted from the report which said there had been very poor planning before the construction began in the late 1960s.

"We have no evidence of any detailed analysis of potential traffic having been made before the decision to build — the decision was certainly not based on any visible prospect of return from compensatory traffic," the report said.

"Point by point, there is a falsification of the record by the premier," the NDP MLA said.

Barrett said that in 1974 he met with the Alaska governor to discuss northern transportation and introduced him to the legislature.

Macdonald said the premier has insulted the commission by indicating its research was wanting.

"I wonder how the chairman of the commission can go on."

Former highways minister Graham Lea also attacked the government for not making a decision on the Fort Nelson extension but predicted that the line would not be abandoned until after the next election because it fears media reaction.

Former economic development minister Gary Lauk (NDP — Vancouver Centre) repeated his call for the government to write off the BCR's debts for life.

"It is the only way the railway can survive," he said. "Interest charges alone eat up revenues to the extent that it will show a net loss position every year."

MAYORS MEET WITH GOV'T

VANCOUVER (CP) — Mayors of several communities served by British Columbia Railway will join 107 Fort Nelson residents in Victoria Thursday to discuss with government officials the fate of the railway's Fort Nelson extension.

Fort Nelson mayor Andrew Schuck said Tuesday that mayors of Fort St. John, Dawson Creek, Taylor, Hudson Hope, Chetwynd, Prince George, Quesnel and Williams Lake have indicated they will make the trip.

Meanwhile, Premier Bill Bennett said in Victoria Tuesday that he will meet with the delegation, but won't be able to tell them anything concrete because the government has not yet studied all the evidence.

John Piety, Fort Nelson Chamber of Commerce manager, said if the extension is abandoned three lumber companies in the Fort Nelson area will be forced to close.

He said the companies provide almost $15 million a year to the government in taxes, freight rates and stumpage fees.

McClelland Denies Signed Statements

No staff members of the Alcohol and Drug Commission have been asked to sign a statement they agree with the health ministry's compulsory heroin treatment program, Health Minister Bob McClelland told the legislature Tuesday.

McClelland made the statement in response to questions Monday from Liberal leader Gordon Gibson who asked if such signed declarations are required of employees.

McClelland also said there is no rule that staff members are forbidden to speak about the future of the program in public.

Last September employees who were philosophically opposed to the program were given the option of transferring to a different area, McClelland said, adding that only one did so.

RUGBY AID REFUSED

SURREY (CP) — Municipal council has rejected a request by Surrey Beavers rugby team for funding assistance to go to Quebec.

During hearings of the Task Force on National Unity in Vancouver in February, the Beavers challenged any Quebec rugby team to play a match, to be followed by a beer-drinking contest, to promote Canadian unity.

A Quebec team accepted the challenge.

Trident Arrest Made

BANGOR, Wash. (AP) — The first incidence of civil disobedience this year at the Trident nuclear submarine base resulted in the arrest Tuesday of anti-Trident leader James Douglass.

Douglass, a co-owner of "Ground Zero Centre for Non-Violent Action" adjoining the base, will be charged with "re-entry onto government property after being barred," said a base public affairs officer.

Douglass and four others from the centre were distributing anti-Trident leaflets near the gate Tuesday morning. He was arrested on the road leading to a gate which is classified as government property although it is outside the fence.

Caddy Suit Fails

VANCOUVER (CP) — Valerie Morrow says she has learned that her $1 million suit against General Motors over alleged defects in her Cadillac Eldorado has been dismissed by the British Columbia Supreme Court.

Morrow said she learned of the dismissal after flying here from Edmonton last week. She couldn't drive because her driver's licence has been suspended in both Alberta and B.C. as a result of accumulated speeding infractions.

"They threw out my action against General Motors. The judge said there was no breach of contract," said Morrow, who originally is from Vermillion, Alta.

She filed her first claim for $1 million against GM of Canada Feb. 10 for mechanical difficulties she had with her $15,020 Cadillac after she bought it brand-new in December, 1976.

Morrow said an amendment to the writ for the Cadillac to include her second car, a 1975 Pontiac Astre, was never filed due to technicalities surrounding her first claim.

She has two additional court actions pending.

Neither her $1 million claim against the B.C. rentalsman's office for problems over tenants in a building she owns, nor the claim for $1 million against the provincial attorney-general's office over alleged corruption in the Vancouver court registry office have been heard in court yet.

AIRWEST USE RAPPED

NDP caucus chairman Karen Sanford of Comox Tuesday criticized B.C. cabinet ministers for using AirWest Airlines during the current labor dispute.

She said in a news release it is unfortunate the ministers "who have a serious responsibility to protect the collective bargaining process" are ignoring the dispute.

CUPE'S No Ogre

Students in British Columbia colleges, universities and high schools are all out hunting for summer jobs these days, and an annual dance duet between public employers and the unions over who's to be hired and how many and at what pay rate has been proceeding.

One of the unions, the Canadian Union of Public Employees, has been painted as a mean and greedy ogre for its stiff stance on the matter of hiring students. CUPE has remained firm in its position that any students hired should be paid union wages and should not perform work that would ordinarily be done by a regular union employee.

Saanich municipality is hiring only 63 students for parks and playground work this summer, when it had hoped to hire more than twice as many and for positions in the engineering, public works and planning departments as well.

CUPE has stated that in these departments students should be paid at the full union scale of nearly $7 an hour.

The reaction, predictably, has been agonized. A letter writer elsewhere on this page suggests the union's actions may result in hundreds of small children running about Saanich this summer unsupervised, and in deprivation for numerous students.

Ald. Ian Cass said Canada will never come to grips with unemployment until labor realizes that it is part of the problem.

The union does look a bit smug, and they've been pigheaded about other matters but it has a good case here and should be more vigorous in stating it. Nobody is against students earning their way through university, but let's get a few priorities straight.

The workingman with a family to support and a mortgage to pay should stand in line ahead of the single student who has all kinds of low-cost student loans and free bursaries to help him through his education.

The student summer job program does not take work away from regular employees. CUPE and other unions have been told repeatedly. But it has happened. Last summer, Hospital Employees Union members at Burnaby General threw up a picket line when students hired for the summer began moving furniture around, a job considered a union prerogative.

The pickets halted new construction, and the Labor Relations Board was called in to mediate. The outcome? The LRB ruled in favor of the union. Students had taken over union work.

Once burned, twice shy. Hospital and municipal administrators should be realistic and not expect any union to co-operate in committing hara kiri. To the outsider, it seems the unions are being obstructive but it is not such a simple black and white situation.

A little effort to better understand the strength of convictions on the other side might make reaching an agreement with the unions a little easier for public employers.

Cyril Shelford

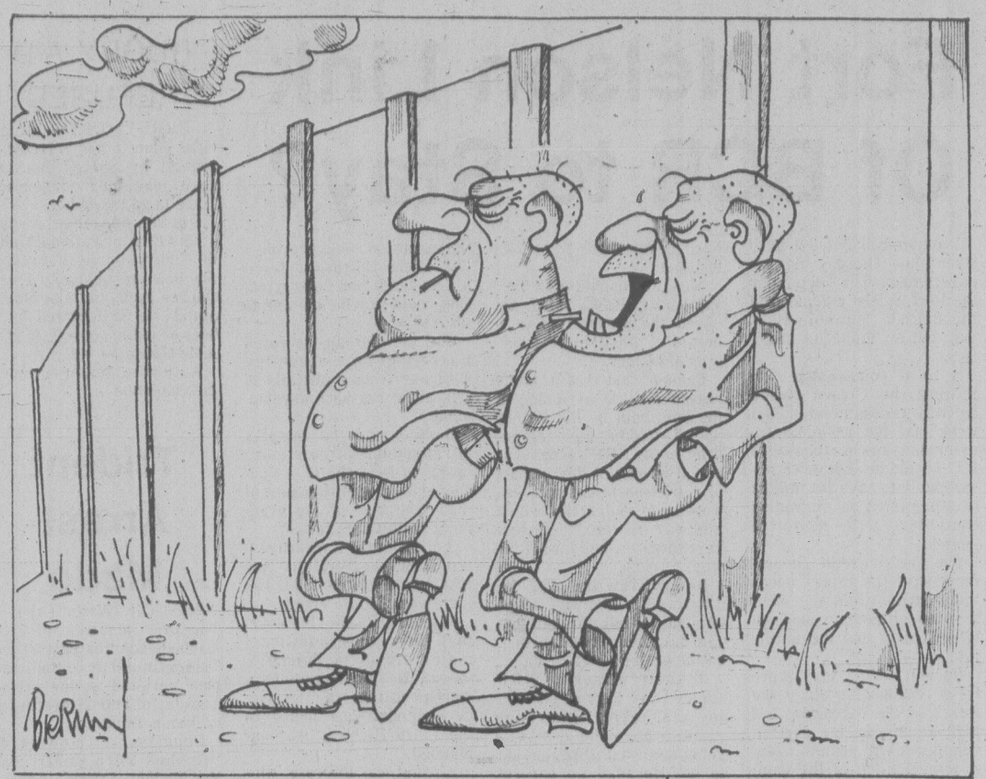

Cyril Shelford, member of the provincial legislature for 23 years except the three years his Social Credit party was out of power, is a politician from whom the process has not rubbed off all the rough edges.

He announced last weekend he's not running again, and it's the legislature's loss. Shelford was — still is — an independent-minded man who's taken on some unpopular, losing causes.

There is his continuing battle on behalf of the service station operators and small independents against the big oil companies. Shelford's influence can be seen in the regulations announced earlier this year that for the first time give them a measure of protection.

He's also one of the few provincial legislators of whom it can be said that he suffered in the line of battle — a broken shoulder, during a B.C. Federation of Labor unemployment demonstration against the provincial cabinet. That one turned vicious, and Shelford spent months recuperating.

Why is it always that good men are defeated and driven out?

". . . jeez, what kind of jail system is it when they condemn a few guys for drinking a little fruit juice and lighting a bonfire to keep warm . . ."

Even Royal Deer Must Wait

LONDON — Canadians can expect to pay even more for British candy and clothes, thanks to their recent budget.

Don't let anyone fool you that Canada is a free trader. The tariff imposed by Canada on British and Irish knitted clothes — sweaters for instance — now is 27½ per cent. The candy tariff is now 20 per cent (up from 12½ per cent before the budget).

Altogether increases in Canadian tariffs on British goods will affect more than $51 million worth of trade. What Canada did was to abolish the old British preferential tariff rates. Now British exporters must fall in line with the rest of the European Common Market. But the move will, the Canadian government has told Britain, "assist Canadian manufacturers" as well. So make do with Canadian candy and woollies.

TV Tariffs

If the rental on cable television systems goes up the tariffs might also be the cause; British equipment used in such systems had been duty free and now has a 15 per cent tariff.

A cargo of 8,000 tons of British Columbia pulp and plywood was the first shipment to arrive at the newly opened British port development in Bristol, on the west coast.

But the Norwegian-registered Kiwi Arrow carrying the stuff steamed into the new deepwater dock just about one year late. The reason: labor disputes tied up the brand new $80 million dock all that time. The cost to the good taxpayers of Bristol was $830,000 a month in interest charges without one penny of revenue.

The trouble with Canada's economy is that too many Canadians spend winters in Florida and Hawaii — that's what the London Financial Times diagnoses.

In an editorial, the newspaper ponders the decline of the Canadian dollar at a a time when the Canadian foreign trade is experiencing a healthy surplus. How come? Because of an even heavier deficit in the "invisible" financial account — the money that escapes the country in tourism and other forms. The deficit is $7.5 billion.

"It arises partly from the appetite of Canadians for foreign travel, especially the lure of Florida and Hawaii during the fierce Canadian winter," says the Financial Times.

Another reason, says the paper: the cost of servicing Canadian foreign debt — $4 billion.

Even when the Queen is involved, it's not so simple to move seven deer from Richmond Park in London to Shubenacadie wildlife park in Nova Scotia.

Dear Me

Presented by HRH as a jubilee gift last October, the deer won't roam Nova Scotia until June at least. Rear Admiral Desmond Piers, D.S.C., C.D., R.C.N., Nova Scotia agent-general in London, explains: "The rutting season had just started when they were presented in October and wildlife specialists advised against moving them. The other factor was they shed their antlers in early spring and that is a big consideration when it comes to crating them for the transatlantic air journey."

So now you know. The deer, rounded up April 21, must spend 14 days quarantined at Whipsnade Zoo, then 30 days at Levis, Que., quarantine station before being uncrated at the N.S. park.

Bunch of Bad News for Joe

OTTAWA — For the Conservatives, the bad news has come in clusters.

Toronto MP James Gillies' decision to retire, for reasons that are purely personal, robs the party of one of its brightest economic stars. Even before Gillies broke the news, Conservative insiders were trying to keep their spirits up in the face of a survey report made to them by party pollster Bob Teeter of Canadian Opinion Research. In Ontario,

Teeter discovered, the Conservatives now trail the Liberals by seven percentage points, as against their dead-heat position last winter.

Unless public attitudes in Ontario change, even the strongest new Conservative candidates, like former mayor David Crombie and former Conference Board president Robert de Cotret, could lose. Lost as well would be all Conservative hopes of a cross-Canada victory.

Among political pros, it's a rule of thumb that a deficit of eight percentage points is about the maximum a partyy can recover during an actual campaign. The Conservatives thus remain within the realm of the politically possible in Ontario, but at its outer edge. Further, to achieve a national victory, the Conservatives would have to do better than just even in Ontario in order to offset the looming Liberal near-sweep in Quebec.

While they're down, the Conservatives are far from out. Perhaps never before has voter opinion, in Ontario and elsewhere, ben so volatile: what has been so quickly lost, therefore, can be as quickly won back again.

Further, Teeter's poll is out of date: it measured the impact of Prime Minister Trudeau's wowing of the businessmen in New York and wooing of the premiers in Ottawa, but not the impact of a dollar that has gone down at the same speed as inflation and unemployment have gone up.

The Liberals, by the way, have so far completed only part of their own comparable national survey by Toronto pollster Martin Goldfarb. This weekend Goldfarb will give the complete news to Trudeau, and it is only then that the election date will be set.

Thus far Goldfarb's computer has coughed up only the national head count. His findings are similar to those published recently by the Gallup organization. Like Gallup, Goldfarb gives the LIberals 45 per cent of the vote nationwide; Goldfarb drops the Conservatives to 32 per cent from Gallup's 34 per cent, and boosts the New Democratic Party from Gallup's 17 per cent to 19 per cent. These differences, while interesting, are well within the mathematical margin of error.

The eight leaderless Social Credit MPs are searching frantically for a political shelter within which they could hope to survive the coming Trudeau whirlwind in Quebec.

The proposition being debated behind the scenes would be for the Creditistes to continue to hold on to their political faith, but to take out some political insurance with the Conservatives. In return for a public pledge by the Social Crediters to support a Conservative government, the Tories would agree to run no candidates in the eight Creditiste ridings. Similarly, the Creditistes would withdraw from selected Quebec ridings in which Conservartive prospects are at least promising.

One complication is that the Liberals, naturally, are counter-wooing the Socreds. Another is that the only Creditiste MP actually prepared to join the Comservatives is independence-minded (for Quebec) Rene Matte, and he, says a party member, "is the one Creditiste we don't want."

Keith Spicer, the lip-swinging ex-commissioner of official languages, may slow down sufficiently to become Liberal candidate in the British Columbia riding of New Westminster. Obstacles that Spicer faces are that the riding executive is divided on his candidacy, and that anyway, no one believes he could defeat incumbent New Democrat Stu Leggatt.

For an explanation why Jim Peterson, the Liberal candidate in the Toronto riding of Willowdale, is running such a well-heeled campaign, you need look no further than at his unofficial, but key, fundraiser, ex-finance minister Turner. The tie that binds them is that both men work for the Toronto corporate law factory of McMillan, Binch.

The intriguing unanswered question about Turner is whether he will seek to hold onto his place in the after-Trudeau-who? stakes by showing up at Liberal gatherings. So far the headliners the Liberals plan to make most use of when Trudeau isn't available are Finance Minister Jean Chretien and Sports Minister Iona Campangolo. Add Turner and you've got the three candidates for the next Liberal leadership convention, likely to be held in 1980, or in 1990, or in 2000.

Proud Union

How proud the members of the Canadian Union of Public Employees in Saanich must be! Just look at what has been accomplished by their insistence that all students hired for summer work must be paid union pay rates.

They may well force hundreds of small children to go without supervised playground programs this summer, and hundreds of distracted parents will no doubt thank CUPE for this, every morning for the next few months!

They have probably deprived numerous students of the chance to earn their university fees, and to gain experience in earning their way in the world; and in doing this they will also have swelled unemployment figures.

They have shown what they think of the Saanich electorate, the principle of free speech and the basic idea of fair play, by reportedly refusing to allow the elected mayor of the municipality to put his case before the Union membership in person.

Instead of persuading students that enlightened unionism can be beneficial to society, they have acted in a way which will convince still more members of an already irritated public that right-to-work legislation is long overdue. A recent local survey showed 75 per cent of those polled favor such legislation already, and to these may well be added many students (who will soon be voters) and their relatives.— B. T. Smith, Box 1321 Victoria.

Handicapped

When are the physically disabled citizens of British Columbia going to be protected by the provincial human rights code? The provinces of Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Manitoba, as well as the United States have amended their codes to include the disabled. The precedent has been set throughout North America, therefore why is the government of B.C. denying this basic human right to its physically disabled citizens? Are the human rights of the handicapped not important enough to worry about?

This seems to be the attitude of the provincial government. If this is not true, then the department of labor, which is responsible for the code, could rectify this ridiculous situation immediately by amending the existing code.

The government of B.C. continuously promotes the hiring of the handicapped, but under present legislation, an employer can deny a handicapped person a job even if he is fully qualified and capable. The same applies for tenancy: a landlord can refuse any disabled person.

We should not have to beg the government to make these simple changes for equality. If the rights of the physically disabled are not going to be protected by legislation in B.C., then the handicapped might as well sit back and be a burden to society, which will also result in a loss of self-respect. — Les Watson Executive Director, Handicapped Resource Centre.

Three Dukes

Re your editorial April 5, A Little Hysterical:

This I must agree with in the main, except one item — the implication that Canada is under the old parliamentary system. My history tells me different; a verbatim quotation as follows:

"Not before the 1850s and perhaps not before Palmerston's last administration of 1859-1865 when the Peelites and Russell joined the government did Great Britain get the kind of two-party system that had already been familiar to Canada for thirty years."

Even that Liberal government was composed of three dukes, two peers' sons, one duke's brother, four other peers and three very blue-blooded baronets. — Len Skelton, 4068 Grange Road.

Award Winners

What a shame the academy awards have come and gone. Just hours before was the premiere of the greatest cloak and dagger performance at the Bennett Theatre on Belleville Street.

Goodness me, Bill Bennett would have won the Oscar for Best Director hands down and Jack Davis would have walked off with the Best Actor award without opposition.

Alfred Hitchcock must have slipped not to have written this scenario.

Have heart though, Bill and Jack. Surely the people of British Columbia will remember and give you your "suitable awards" come the next election. — Roy Elphick, 1193 Munro Street, Victoria.

Underpasses

Residing in our western community of Colwood, Langford and Metchosin area and by necessity travelling the normal Trans-Canada route, a question comes to mind daily that I feel requires a reply.

When the construction of our new four-lane, 1978 highway from Town and Country to Thetis Lake is completed, "may I assume" an uninterrupted, no-stoplight, safe passage?

Our American friends and neighbors, who we are all too ready to criticize, have clean passage from the Canadian border to Mexico without a tension-building, accident-prone stoplight. Can we have a few short miles without one or haven't our highway builders heard of overpasses or underpasses? — Sam Pain, Victoria.

Cellist's Ouster Signals Dark Days for Dissidents

By KEVIN CLOSE
Washington Post

MOSCOW — For this capital's dwindling group of dissidents, an already grim scenario of renewed repression turned still darker with the unexpected announcement last month that Mstislav Rostropovich had been banished.

"Belgrade is over and this is a signal," said the wife of a man who had spent part of his life in Stalinist prison camps and now lives in Moscow. Signatories to the Helsinki agreement met recently in Belgrade to review the 1975 accord, including observance of its human rights provisions.

To this couple as to others, Rostropovich has been a special symbol. They knew that the world-famed National Symphony director and his wife, Galina Vishnevskaya, the soprano, had been abroad since 1974. Yet the notion that he could return here despite his occasional criticisms about restrictions on artistic freedom here and despite his long, protective friendship with author Alexander Solzhenitsyn, was comforting to the dissidents and human rights activists in their moments of depresson.

This illusion was broken when the Supreme Soviet harshly denounced the famed cellist and his wife as "ideological degenerates" and stripped them of their citizenship. For the dissidents, it was one more in a series of unexpected blows to those who have dedicated themselves to criticizing what they see as the Kremlin's falure to obey its own laws.

"Rostropovich was on a musical level with Solzhenitsyn," said the woman, "but he was not the same kind of dissident as Solzhenitsyn. This means that something serious is going on. When Rostropovich was in favor in Washington, the Soviets flirted with him, asking him to national receptions. Dobrynin (Soviet Ambassador Anatoliy F. Dobrynin) talked with him." Cultivating Rostropovich improved the Soviet image in the United States, he said.

'Something serious going on in Kremlin'

In typically Russian style, many dissidents and other non-dissenting intellectuals in this capital spent many hours analyzing the move against Rostropovich for signs of the intentions of the leadership. Yet, only the Kremlin really knows and this is as much a part of the psychological warfare waged against the dissidents as many of the overt acts.

The searchers find much that is disturbing in recent days. Last month saw a list of such events: banishment of Pyotr Grigorenko, the old Red Army major general who has had his citizenship stripped from him while in America for medical treatment; the banishment of Rostropovich and Vishnevskaya; an attack on Yuri Lyubimov, the innovative director of the famed Taganka theatre, and the Kremlin boasting about its success at the Belgrade conference where the United States was thwarted in efforts to raise substantive questions about Soviet violations of human rights.

In addition, the dissident community has been jarred by the reports from Wasington that a dissident turncoat who has denounced the movement, Sanya Lipavsky, worked for the Central Intelligence Agency in 1975-76. Lipavsky was the author of a denunciation of Anatoly Scharansky, a dissident who has been arrested and charged with treason in a case that continues to be an international cause celebre.

In the minds of many, the action against Rostropovich is especially alarming because the Kremlin had gone to great lengths to cater to the musician, allowing him unusual freedom to work abroad. For a number of years, the leadership seemed satisfied if he came home from time to time to demonstrate his loyalty.

"They wanted to keep him as a Soviet who occasonally worked abroad," said one source. "But he made clear that he wanted conditions of freedom for himself and other illustrious musicians and that presented a choice of either changing the atmosphere in the country or forcing Rostropovich out. Of course, it was a lot easier to cut him off than to change the atmosphere."

At one point during his recent years away, the cellist was quoted as saying he would return here only if full artistic freedom was extended to him and other artists. He had the kind of special privileges that the leadership can extend to elite contributors to Soviet life. Rostropovich enjoyed a handsomely furnished country house and special practice facilities.

"As with other favored members of the intelligentsia, they wanted to create special conditions for him," one source said. He said this is done from time to time with top scientists, "to give the impression that all scientists can freely come and go. But Rostropovich decided not to participate in that compromise. This, plus his contacts with dissidents, was enough to convince them not to let him back."

The conductor had befriended Solzhenitsyn when the author was being pilloried in the Soviet press in 1970 after he was awarded the Nobel Prize for literature. Rostropovich spoke out for Solzhenitsyn. "This was never forgotten," said a source, a man seasoned by years of experience within the Communist Party. He spelled out the punitive ingredients in the decision against Rostropovich.

"They obviously wanted to punish him by separating him from his friends. He had relatives here, many friends, a house. As they see it, in the West he has only his music."

"In addition, it shows other musicians that they'd better stick to a pretty straight line, even a special person like Rostropovich can run afoul of authorities who are otherwise eager to make exceptions."

In the view of this source, Rostropovich was a marked man ever since his defence of Solzhenitsyn. "After that, Rostropovich's conditions of work deteriorated here," he said.

Film Decision the Right One

THE PROVINCE
An Editorial

Mary-Lou McCausland, B.C.'s new director of film classification, has had her first test in a situation that had all the potential for major public controversy. She deserves the highest praise for the way she handled it.

The tricky situation involved the controversial new film Pretty Baby, which has been widely praised by film critics, but which was banned by film censors in Ontario. With the momentum seemingly building for a national crusade against alleged pornography (recent letters to the editor, for example, indicate that a vocal segment of the public supports the hard line approach recently advocated by a Commons committee), it might have been easy for Ms. McCausland to have followed the Ontario example.

But she wasn't stampeded. Pretty Baby has been approved for showing in B.C., with a restricted label and the usual classifier's warning. At a time when censorship seems to be regaining fashionability in some political circles, Ms. McCausland's decision is a victory for our right to make up our own minds.

Pretty Baby, by the respected director Louis Malle, has been widely praised by prominent critics as an intelligent, artistic film, but its subject is a sensitive one. Twelve-year-old Brooke Shields stars as the daughter of a prostitute, expected to follow her mother's profession, in a New Orleans brothel in 1917. According to the Ontario Censor Board, that made the film indistinguishable from kiddie porn.

But the B.C. classifier's warning doesn't even mention scenes of sex involving children — for the simple reason that there are none.

"What Pretty Baby is really about," says one critic, "is innocence and experience, childhood and adulthood, selfishness and responsibility." Another says it is "the most beautifully intelligent picture to have come out of America so far this year."

There is, of course, nothing holy about the word of film critics. They have been wrong about films before and could be wrong about this one. The point is that we should be able to judge it for ourselves.

Ontario filmgoers won't be able to make their own judgements because the censor board has decided that the whole theme involving child prostitution is "distasteful."

McCAUSLAND
. . . passes first test

That is the basic problem with the kind of pro-censorship spirit that seems to be growing in this country. There is a difference between an artistic treatment of a sexual subject and prurient exploitation of sex, but not everyone draws the line in the same place.

How much right does any group of moral guardians, whether self-appointed or government appointed, have to draw that line on behalf of others?

A film like Pretty Baby may indeed be offensive or distasteful to some people. But no one is forcing those people to pay $3.50 to see it.

Japanese Business Pushes for Arms Trade

By MARK MURRAY

TOKYO — After enduring five years of nerve-wracking economic recession, Japanese business is ready to clutch at any straw. But what they are seeking to grasp right now could easily turn out to be a live wire in disguise.

For the business community has decided to renew pressure on the government for more freedom in the export of military equipment. It is a highly emotional issue that is closely related to Japan's general nervousness about anything military.

The Japan Chamber of Commerce and the powerful Federation of Economic Organizations (Keidanren) are co-ordinating a joint approach to the government for a more relaxed application of its restrictions on arms exports that effectively amount to a total ban.

The president of the Chamber of Commerce, steelman Shigeo Nagano, revealed this only a day after the highly respected president of Keidanren, Toshiwo Doko, had told reporters there was no need for a total prohibition on military shipments overseas.

Last month in the atom bomb city of Hiroshima, the Chamber of Commerce adopted a resolution calling for relief measures for the recession-plagued shipbilding industry, a lynchpin of the Japanese economy. The resolution urged that shipbuilders be allowed to build and export military vessels as long as they were not equipped with weapons.

Nagano has now followed this up with four reasons why the government ban should be relaxed.

First, he says, the ban is so broad as to make it very difficult to decide what can rightly be classified as a weapon. Secondly, with the shipbuilders in such distress, it is unwise for Japan to be so rigid on the export of items which "could be potentially used as a weapon. The definition of this is almost endless."

Thirdly, Nagano asks whether it is good for Japan to refrain from accepting export orders when countries like West Germany are cashing in on the boom in arms demand.

And finally, since this demand comes primarily from oil-producing countries, arms exports of some description would help recycle petrodollars and help Japan cover the increased cost of its oil imports.

Arms exports have long been restricted by trade control regulations. But two years ago, the government produced a unified stand on the issue consisting of three main points:

Arms exports are not permitted to the Communist bloc, countries with which the United Nations bans such trade, like South Africa and Rhodesia, and any countries involved or likely to be involved in armed conflict.

It also resolved that arms exports to areas other than the three already named would be made sparingly and that the export of plant and equipment for the production of weapons should receive the same treatment as actual arms.

But there has always been considerable official confusion as to what constitutes a weapon. And critics have repeatedly pointed out that a commercial truck could easily be fitted with guns or used to transport troops into battle and therefore would come within the scope of the government prohibition.

The Chamber of Commerce request tries to circumvent the problem by stipulating Japan will only export minesweepers, survey ships and other "non-aggressive" vessels.

Two years ago, Nagano and Bunchiro Tanabe, president of Mitsubishi Corporation, appeared to be on the verge of exporting domestically-developed amphibious patrol planes and medium-sized jet transports.

But when the plan came under attack in and outside Parliament it was dropped.

Since that row, the government has been ultra-cautious about the new business approach. But there is not much enthusiasm. One official privately felt military-related exports of any description would backfire on Japan.

The Most Wanted List

russell baker

ELIZABETH (BETTY THE BREADBASKET) GOOLARIK — Wanted on charges of being overweight in a public place, and 10 counts of failure to look like a bone sack when dressed for dancing. Goolarik was last seen in Peru, Ind., washing down chicken tetrazzini, mashed potatoes, gravy, an ear of corn and a slice of pecan pie with a high-calorie cola drink. Goolarik is easily recognized by a coating of flesh, which she wears attached to her bone structure, and by her inability to swoon when the waiter suggests a chocolate parfait. Should be approached with care, as she is skilled with fork, spoon and knife and has, in several cases, lured pursuers into joining her in an order of spaghetti with chicken livers.

ERNEST (MISTER CLEAN) CLOXBURY — A three-time loser, Cloxbury has been convicted of sexual inhibition, repressing a minor and wearing pajamas in bed. He is wanted by sociologists in California and New York on charges of monogamous heterosexuality and hiding a copy of Forever Amber in the laundry hamper during visits from his grandmother. Cloxbury can be identified by his refusal to undress until the lights are out.

ALPHONSE (WHEELS) CARAMBA — This insatiable gasoline guzzler strikes without warning, pulling his car into filling stations, aiming a wad of $20 bills and ordering attendants to "fill her up." He has bought 80 gallons in four cities within the past month. In his wake he has left scores of small economy cars so desperately scarred by contact with the voracious appetite of Caramba's powerful car that they are ashamed to resume normal gasoline consumption. Caramba is known to fear that he may be mobbed and beaten by jealous small car owners and is said to carry two loaded gasoline containers at all times. Use extreme caution.

GERTRUDE (BUTTS) BLITZER — Blitzer has committed barefaced cigarette smoking in restaurants, parlors, lobbies, taxicabs and lounges of six states, as well as several airplanes. She is identifiable by cigarette holes in her skirt and ashes in her coffee. She carries a lighter and a spare pack and will smoke without warning.

ANDREW UPCHURCH — Known among social enforcers as "Hah-Hah," Upchurch has cut a swath of terror from Milwaukee to Bridgeport by bursting into dying dinner parties and telling ethnic jokes. In Ashtabula, while hitchhiking with a prominent Democrat, he got off a Pakistani joke, a Canadian joke and a Swedish joke before being stopped by a state-patrol roadblock. By that time it was too late to save the driver, who is still in a coma, and Upchurch blasted his way out with three rapid-fire Hindu jokes that have left the Ohio State Police deeply offended.

B. B. (THE OINKER) BURNS — Sought in 39 states and Canada for ruthless male chauvinism, Burns was last seen in San Francisco opening a door for a woman. Her condition is still critical. Lucinda Burns, his wife, is serving a 10-year sentence in the campaign speeches of Bella Abzug after being convicted of doing the dishwashing. Burns is thought to be eating off dirty plates and may be desperate enough to get off a hail of mother-in-law jokes unless taken by surprise.

CASPER HASPELL — The most notorious do-gooder and bleeding heart on the continent, Haspell has committed a vile series of good-doings that have made his name repugnant to politicians, editorialists and policemen from coast to coast. Convicted of attempting to commit do-goodism in the Congress, he escaped by shocking authorities with a free lunch. "There is no such thing as a free lunch!" they cried in amazement, as Haspell climbed unnoticed over the top line. He has since been convicted in absentia of not being a bottom-line man. People in trouble should be particularly on guard, as Haspell is a seasoned do-gooder whose bleeding heart may leave unsightly splotches on unpayable bills without warning.

ELVIN (THE JUICE) BROOMSTER — Sometimes called the most revolting beast in America, Broomster is guilty of at least 15,000 recorded acts of materialism, ranging from getting his suit pressed once a month to shunning the Bicentennial Celebration fireworks of 1976 because he couldn't see how it was going to improve his earning power. Broomster was last seen having his house rewired to accommodate 18 new electric appliances. Unmarried, he is said to be looking for an electrician who will wire an accommodating woman so he can be the first man in his neighborhood with an electric wife.

Referendum Again Urged

Municipal Affairs Minister Hugh Curtis has again been asked to allow a referendum on local government in the western community.

In a letter delivered to the minister's office by restructuring committee chairman Howard Drummond, Curtis was asked to allow votes to be held in Metchosin, Langford, Colwood and View, Royal on Nov. 18, the same day as municipal elections.

The committee wanted a vote in 1977 but could not get a decision from Curtis in time.

The committee has now asked for $5,000 for advertising and wants provincial staff members to provide the financial information the voters will need.

"We want to get started on this in May or June and then really work on it during September and October," Drummond says.

Drummond said Curtis has been asked to permit incorporation votes in Metchosin and in an amalgamated area covering Colwood and Langford. It has yet to be decided whether View Royal will vote on incorporation alone or on amalgamation with Esquimalt.

Meanwhile, Glen Lake resident Aubrey Jenkins has lodged a protest with Curtis regarding a submission on regional government released by Jim Campbell, chairman of the Capital Regional District board last week.

Campbell said he wants Curtis to impose local government on such areas as Colwood and Langford which clearly need it.

Jenkins accused Campbell of political arrogance and empire building.

He said the submission should have been made in January when the provincial review committee held hearings in Victoria.

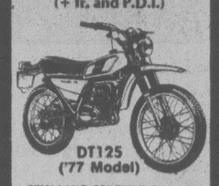

Jenkins said he is in favor of incorporation but having it imposed through the framework of a regional body or by political pressure would be repugnant and completely irresponsible.

SWAN SLAYER JAILED

VANCOUVER — A 35-year-old Vancouver man was sentenced in Vancouver provincial court today to 30 days in jail for the theft of a $300 male Mute swan from Lost Lagoon in Stanley Park.

Ljuben Jordon Stanenov was also placed on one-year's probation by Judge Allen Cliffe, who ordered the jail sentence after Stanenov refused to say he would not commit the act again.

Stanenov told Judge Cliffe he killed the bird because his welfare payments did not cover his food costs. He refused to say he would not take more swans, but did say he would feed them and fatten them up first.

Problem-Free Year for Construction?

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — Establishment of a bargaining council for the construction industry unions should ensure a problem-free year for the industry, the president of the Construction Labor Relations Association says.

Chuck McVeigh, commenting on formation of a new single bargaining unit for 47 unions, said that he would like to see both industry and unions make a joint effort to reach a new agreement.

"We need a contract at a reasonable price so we don't price ourselves out of the market," said McVeigh, who was here to address a meeting of the Prince George Construction Association.

Bargaining is due to begin within the next few weeks.

While the construction trades always had a building trades council, under the new council one master contract will be bargained for with provisions for individual unions. A strike vote must be taken among all unions concerned.

McVeigh said that if the joint union council concept proves unworkable, something else will have to be done to avoid the costly labor strife that has plagued the industry for years. He didn't rule out the open-shop concept.

Meanwhile, he said the biggest problem facing the industry is unemployment, not only now but in the future.

Edmonton Racism Rife: Official

EDMONTON (CP) — Dr. Kamal Jha, president of the Hindu Society of Alberta, says no chances will be taken in the construction of a Hindu cultural centre — the building will be designed in such a way that racist vandals will find it difficult to deface.

A group of whites recently stoned the home of an East Indian family, breaking several windows.

A gang of youths chanting "Paki, Paki" surrounded a youth at a city high school, goaded him into a fight and kicked him when he was down.

These are a sample of the incidents reported to authorities who are noting a rise in racism in the city.

Harry Midgley, president of the Alberta Human Rights and Civil Liberties Association, says there has been a "detectable tide" of increased racism

He says his group has received complaints of discrimination in obtaining jobs and housing, complaints of personal insults, and of discriminatory treatment by police.

"It would be a great mistake for the people of Edmonton to make the comfortable assertion that this is a community where people with different backgrounds feel they receive equal treatment," says Midgley.

"And it's been our experience in the last year that it's been mainly felt by people from East Asia and Africa."

Professor Saleem Qureshi, leader of the 5,000-member Pakistani community, says the racial problem is getting worse.

"There is a feeling among a large number of people that racial discriminaton is getting worse . . . one hears more and more of people being called 'Paki'."

Some members of the Fijian community have said they will arm themselves unless police protection is improved.

They say racism is the cause of a shooting incident in which a Fijian immigrant was shot twice in the back last week while checking a tire on his car.

The leaders of two East Indian groups have backed a claim by a Fijian community leader who says racism has become a serious problem in the city.

"The Fijians are justified in saying they are concerned, and if police can't protect them then they will just have to arm themselves," said an East Indian leader, who requested anonymity because of fear of retaliation.

"If this is an organized campaign (against non-whites), then anyone who expresses an opinion against it could be the next target," said the leader, a professor at the University of Alberta.

Koil Pillai, chairman of the council of India societies of Alberta, says name-calling is the most frequent type of racial harassment.

"It's the name-calling that has made people the most uncomfortable," says Pillai.

Gibraltar Mines

Gibraltar Mines Ltd. reported that operations in the three months ending March 31 resulted in a loss of $600,000, or five cents a share, compared with a profit of $2,289,000, or 20 cents a share, for the same period last year.

Revenues totalled $8,197,000 compared with $16,335,000 in the first quarter of 1977.

"The substantial difference is earnings is primarily due to a lower average grade of ore mined, a smaller volume of copper concentrate sold, and lower copper prices in 1978," said R. G. Duthie, president.

Make more of tomorrow.

The future doesn't come with a written guarantee. Not even if you're more intelligent than average. And have the will to succeed.

But we can give you an edge. The professional edge.

With the only study program designed specifically to prepare you for the profession of Management Accounting.

You will gain more than a thorough grasp of accounting, information systems and cost analysis. We also provide a broad range of management skills and insights.

So you learn to work with figures from the management viewpoint. To help plan future developments. Compare alternatives. Monitor progress. And measure results.

That's why so many men and women who earn accreditation as RIA Management Accountants also earn a central role on the management team.

As you'd expect, it's a demanding study program.

Professional scope and opportunity never come easy. It typically requires five or six years of evening lectures or home study combined with on-the-job experience. But many students who have completed equivalent post-secondary studies have finished the RIA program in less than two years. And you benefit long before graduation because you apply during the day, what you learn during the evening.

Ontario Pot User Likely Poisoned, Says Doctor

HAMILTON (CP) — A doctor says a drug user is suffering from probable poisoning after using marijuana believed to have been sprayed with the herbicide paraquat in a Mexican government program to curb the illicit drug trade.

Dr. Dennis Psutka, director of emergency services at McMaster University Medical Centre, said Tuesday that he felt obligated to inform the public that the contaminated marijuana is probably in this area.

Last month, the U.S. department of health, education and welfare issued a warning that smoking Mexican marijuana might lead to irreversible lung damage.

An estimated 20 per cent of the drug entering the U.S. is contaminated with paraquat, officials have said. The contamination was estimated at more than 2,200 parts per million compared with a maximum allowable level of 0.05 on food crops in the U.S.

The U.S. government has been subsidizing Mexico's spraying program, but farmers have been harvesting marijuana crops before the chemical can take effect.

Dr. Psutka would not give details about the age or sex of the local marijuana smoker because of possible legal ramifications.

He said the patient, being observed for possible kidney damage, smoked some marijuana during the weekend and experienced chest pains, nausea and diarrhea.

He said the patient went to the emergency department two days later because of blood in the urine.

Dr. Psutka said he could not confirm that paraquat was involved because of the time lapse, but he said the symptoms are "classic and we are assuming it was."

Symptoms include dizziness, sore throat, a burning sensation in the chest, nausea and vomiting, he said.

He said he has not heard of any deaths caused by smoking paraquat.

There have been some reports of probable paraquat poisoning in the Toronto area, he added.

"I've heard reports of a $4 testing kit being available that works on a color changing principal if paraquat is present in the marijuana, but drug users know more about that than we do."

Hobby Breaks Gun Law

OTTAWA (CP) — Gun collectors across Canada cannot comply with gun-control laws because the government has prevented the RCMP from issuing gun collection permits, Conservative MP Eldon Woolliams said Tuesday.

Woolliams (Calgary North) told the Commons justice department lawyers have told the RCMP it does not have the power to issue permits to bona fide gun collectors.

He called on Justice Minister Ron Basford to "stop waffling and set up guidelines."

Under the law, which went into effect last fall, gun collectors may keep their collections if they are certified bona fide by the commissioner of the RCMP.

However, Woolliams quoted a letter from an RCMP superintendent which said the commissioner would not issue certificates because of the justice department advice.

He said in an interview that the real problem is that the government did not define bona fide gun collectors in the legislation.

Festival

Passing on the Knowledge Gained in Previous Years

By AUDREY JOHNSON
Times Staff

In the 38 years since it was established, the Greater Victoria Music Festival has never faltered in its vitality but has grown steadily from its initial couple of hundred entries, to the present couple of thousand. In fact just over 1,900 entries will show up in the 1978 edition which opened this week with a single category — folk dance — at S.J. Willis School.

The snow-balling effect through the years has been the result of people of all ages wanting to emulate each other; younger siblings, school mates, choral groups and private studio pupils constantly taking up the challenge to get into the festival.

Parents frequently tell about older children passing on what they have learned to the younger ones. Enthusiastic coaching and advice is freely exchanged. In private studio classes for music, dance and speech, the experienced festival entrant helps along those who are new to it all.

And then there are the "graduates"whose progress has been visible through past festivals and who have now become teachers — young professionals who in their turn, are preparing a generation of students tempermentally suited and inclined to participate in the event.

There is, for example, Walter Prossnitz, a pianist who capped several years of study and festival exploits by winning, in sequence, the City of Victoria Medallion in the 1977 festival, the Provincial Music Festival championship, and the National championship and over-all grand prize.

At present teaching at Pearson College, and with pupil entries in next week's festival classes, Walter, who was the only Canadian chosen from a field of some 200 pianists and won second place out of 18 finalists in an international United States competition recently, praises the low profile competition takes in the Victoria Festival and the goodwill that abounds among entrants.

"It's not that way everywhere by any means," he says. "In most competitive festivals people are constantly trying to gain a psychological advantage over you. They tell you in advance how good they are — how many prizes they have won and the rave adjudications they have had. It's all intended to intimidate you."

His advice to those coming newly onto the scene is to concentrate on doing the best they are capable of and remembering that only one person can win and it might as easily be you as someone else.

"Once you're on the other end (teaching)," he says,"you can understand why adjudicators do some of the things that seem strange. The thing to do is try to develop a philosophical attitude under all circumstances."

In vocal classes the festival-wise accompanist-coach is a marvelous source for the new and probably nervous entrant. The singer, because his instrument is his own body and subject to every qualm, relies strongly on the steadiness, sympathy and comprehension of a festival veteran at the piano.

First week of the current Victoria Music Festival ends Friday evening with a folk dance honor performance program at Central Junior Secondary. The program will consist of groups selected by adjudicator Jacqueline Sears, based on achievement, not only of a technical kind, but also in the areas of originality and enthusiasm. Starting time is 7:30.

The second week opens Monday with vocal classes ranging from small soloists of nine or 10 to adults in operatic, oratorio and other major classes. These will be in the Ephraim Evans Auditorium of Metropolitan United Church. The large piano section of the festival will occupy two centres — First United Fellowship Hall and Christ Church Cathedral Memorial Hall. At Oak Bay Junior Secondary there will be string classes and at St.Matthias Hall, speech. Highland dance sessions will occupy Friday and Saturday, April 28 and 29 at St.John's Hall.

In the third week, from May 1 to May 6, piano will continue at the same halls, woodwinds and brass at Metropolitan, studio dance classes at Oak Bay, choral at St.John's Sanctuary, bands at Lansdowne and guitar and accordion at St.John's Hall. An accompaniment class, and two for electronic organ will be held at St.John's Hall and two pipe organ classes in the Sanctuary.

The festival's special events include the piano championships which will take place May 6 at UVic's MacLaurin auditorium; the vocal Rose Bowl championship at Metropolitan Church, May 3; Congress of Strings scholarship competition at Christ Church Cathedral Hall, April 27; speech honor program, St.Matthias Hall, April 27; Dance honor program, Oak Bay Junior, May 5, and School honor performance, Central Junior, May 4.

The Highlights Concert, which is the grand finale presenting the top award winners and other outstanding performances, is scheduled for the McPherson Playhouse, May 8 at 8 p.m.

Team Canada Opens On Note of Optimism

GOTEBORG, Sweden (CP) — One exhibition victory doesn't prove anything but Team Canada '78 has reason for at least mild optimism after soundly defeating Sweden 5-1 Tuesday night in its first warmup for the world hockey championship.

The young Canadian team, put together only two days earlier and with just two practices behind it, played a remarkably disciplined, cohesive game that never left much doubt about the outcome.

The youthful defence corps—Pat Ribble of Atlanta Flames is its oldest member at 24—displayed a surprising aplomb, and goalies Dan Bouchard and Denis Herron were sharp on the relatively few difficult shots they had to handle.

Bouchard put the puck in the net himself on Sweden's only goal. Early in the second period he caught a shot by Lars Gunnar Lundberg, then accidently dropped the puck into the corner of the net.

That tied the score 1-1, Garry Unger having opened the scoring with a power-play goal mid-way through the first period, but the Swedes rarely threatened after that.

Goals by defenceman David Shand and centre Guy Charron made it 3-1 before the second period ended and Marcel Dionne and Wilf Paiement added two in the third.

"We are a little short on condition but it was not evident tonight," said coach Harry Howell. "Everybody was working so hard they made up for it. I liked the spirit and I liked the way everybody gave 100 per cent all the way even though they might have been a little tired."

Howell praised the penalty killing—Canada took five of the six penalties although there would have been a second Swedish penalty if Paiement hadn't scored on a delayed tripping call. He also felt the Canadian power play worked well and was impressed with the poise of defencemen Shand, Ribble, Rick Hampton, Dave Maloney, Brad Maxwell and Bob Picard.

He noted that Canada has a flock of goal scorers—12 of the 13 forwards have 20 goals or more and eight have 30 or better—but that they're also skaters.

"The Europeans have always been good skaters and we can skate with them. And that's going to be a great advantage for us because we can hit with them, we can score with them, but we can also skate with them. Which makes a difference. That takes away their game."

Dionne, a member of Canada's winning team in the Canada Cup 1976, believes this year's club has better chances than last year's Team Canada which finished fourth.

Leafs To Come Out Hitting

By Times News Services

Chicago Black Hawks, Detroit Red Wings, Toronto Maple Leafs and Buffalo Sabres know they can't afford to dig themselves into a deeper hole than the one they already are filling.

Each of those clubs lost the opening game of their best-of-seven National Hockey League quarter-final playoff series. They know that while the comforts of home ice change after the second game tonight, there is little reassurance to playing in familiar surroundings if their teams are face a 2-0 series deficit.

The reason, of course, is that the four leading teams—Montreal Canadiens, Philadelphia Flyers, New York Islanders and Boston Bruins—have compiled excellent road records this season.

"It's not a good way to start a series when you get the stuffing knocked out of you," said veteran Stan Mikita, whose Black Hawks suffered a 6-1 thrashing by the Bruins at Boston Garden on Monday night.

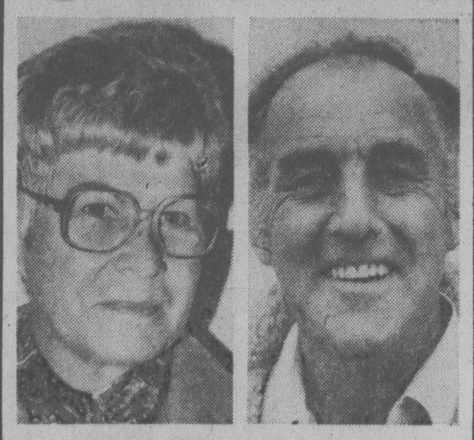

The Maple Leafs did plenty of hitting in their opener against New York Islanders, but suffered a lapse in poise during the first period. The disciplined Islanders, no strangers to hitting, either, pounced on their opportunities to take a 3-0 lead on the way to a 4-1 triumph.

"I think the Islanders can be outhit," said Toronto right winger Lanny McDonald, who played a physical game in defeat Monday night. "I'm sure they know they were in a hockey game."

The game between the Leafs and Islanders will be telecast on channels 2 and 6 starting at 5 p.m.

The Red Wings, meanwhile, haven't won a game at the Canadiens' Montreal Forum home since March 20, 1974 and lost 6-2 Monday night in the opener of that series. Detroit only recently ended a 23-game winless streak against the Canadiens by shutting out Montreal 4-0 in the final regular season game at Detroit.

"We know we played badly in the first game and we'll know we have to come out better in the second game," said Red Wings forward Paul Woods, who has four assists so far in Stanley Cup play. "Our all-around play has to improve. We have to be skating more and moving.

A Simple Phone Call Would Have Sufficed

The first marathon was run in 490 B.C. when the Greeks sent a runner 22 miles, 1,470 yards to let Athens know they'd just beaten hell out of the Persians.

It seemed like a good idea, so the Americans stole it.

Naturally, they moved it.

"Where the hell is Greece?" they asked. "Let's put it in a city with a history."

They selected Boston — a mysterious choice, since Bobby Orr hadn't yet surfaced — and in 1897 launched the first Boston Marathon. History has proved we'd be a lot better off if the Greeks had phoned.

That first Boston Marathon drew a starting field of 15. The 82nd Boston Marathon, a distance of 26 miles, 385 yards since 1908, was run Monday. It drew a starting field of 4,212.

The winner in 1897 was one S. Loues in two hours, 55 minutes, 20 seconds. Details are scanty, but nowhere does it say he or any of the other 14 was run over by a passing horse or mugged by a pedestrian.

The winner Monday was Bill Rodgers, who was 45 minutes and 10 seconds faster. He'd have done even better if he hadn't been run over by a bicycle en route.

Second place went to Jeff Wells, who was only two seconds slower. He might have made up the two seconds, except that near the end he had to vault over a man in a wheelchair.

The guy in Greece had it easy. A river here, a hill there — but no spectators lining the route, no people screaming "Way to give it to them Persians, man!"

Because it was a new event, his marathon hadn't yet been discovered by the masses. It was not yet the place to run and to be seen watching over people run. He was just another soldier carrying word back to the generals, running with the determination of a private who knows his tail is mud if he doesn't get there in a hurry. He needn't have hurried. Once he delivered the message, he died.

Monday in Boston, Rodgers and Wells didn't merely beat 4,210 runners. They also beat the bus carrying marathon officials to the finish line. It couldn't get through the crowds.

Some of those runners never saw the finish line, which is fine. But some of them never saw the starting line, and that's tacky.

There were so many entrants stacked up in holding patterns waiting for room to run that by actual timing it took 15 minutes for the guys at the back to reach the starting line — which by then was well obliterated.

Naturally, officials are looking for someone to blame for the mess. And the top choice is that 60-year-old Swede.

You know the one. All beard and skin and rippling muscles, barely breathing although you know in your heart he's just run 300 miles uphill. And next to him is a typical 40-year-old Canadian: Addidas track suit with color co-ordinated jogging shoes, shorts and towel, waterfall of sweat rolling from his forehead and bouncing off his paunch.

He has not run 300 miles. He has just lurched off his porch two houses down to ask the Swede where in the hell he's going.

"The average 60-year-old Swede is in better shape than the average 40-year-old Canadian man!"

I have a dream about that Swede.

In my dream he is running along and a police car pulls up and takes him away. As the car passes the Canadian — now four miles back — an officer leans out the window and says:

"Finally caught this guy. The girl he's been chasing is 15."

But it doesn't work that way. The commercial — and dozens like it all over North America — is designed to make the North American man feel terrible about feeling terrible. Obviously it has succeeded, and not just with men. Women are running in Boston and running well. They, too, are obsessed with this incredible need to run past the threshold of pain, throw up, and gasp: "What was my time?"

Which is fine. Would that we were all so motivated, although it would play hob with the streets of Boston, not to mention cardiac wards. But the runners are only part of the marathon problem. The real troublemakers are the people in the crowd.

They want to see the race. For some it is a substitute.

As the last runner passes they turn to one another and say:

"Gee, wasn't that great?"

That's what they're saying out loud. Inside, they're saying:

"You couldn't get me out there with a gun."

Reds Jump On Dodgers

By The Associated Press

Pete Rose, the Cincinnati third baseman who now is within 19 hits of becoming the 13th player to reach the 3,000-hit milestone, hints that one more victory over Los Angeles tonight just might be the biggest of the season for the Reds.

"The Dodgers won the pennant last year in April," Rose said. "And if we beat them again, they have to be thinking."

Cincinnati handed the Dodgers an 11-3 beating Tuesday night. In the series opener Monday night, the Reds were just as impressive, rolling over the defending National League baseball champions 8-2.

In the two victories, Cincinnati scored 19 runs and recorded 31 hits. The Reds collected 16 hits Tuesday including home runs by Ken Griffey, George Foster, Joe Morgan and Johnny Bench.

"This is our best team," said Cincinnati manager Sparky Anderson. "If the Dodgers beat us this year, it's because we badly misjudged our talent.

"Winning these first two games doesn't really mean that much. The only thing I can say for sure, we won't be 12 games back in May like we were last year," Anderson said.

In other National League games Tuesday, Atlanta Braves beat San Francisco Giants 1-0, Chicago Cubs defeated Montreal Expos 2-1, New York Mets beat St. Louis Cardinals 3-2 and Houston Astros defeated San Diego Padres 5-1.

With a 9-3 record, the Reds are two games up on both the Dodgers and San Francisco, and will go for a sweep of the Dodgers series tonight when Tom Hume, 2-0, starts against Dodgers ace Tommy John, 2-0.

In the American League, Reggie Jackson hit a ninth-inning homer to give New York Yankees a 4-3 win over Baltimore Orioles and veteran Luis Tiant returned from the injury list to pitch three hitless innings in relief and help Boston Red Sox beat Milwaukee Brewers 7-6.

"I felt ready a long time ago," said Tiant, a crowd-pleasing performer. "I didn't even remember about the finger (he dislocated the index finger on his pitching hand during spring training). I just wanted to get someone out." Tiant got everyone out, except for a walk in the ninth inning.

Bostock To Give It Back!

LOS ANGELES (AP) — An annual salary of $450,000 is too much for an outfielder hitting .051 with two hits in 39 at-bats, says Lyman Bostock of baseball's California Angels.

So he has vowed not to accept his April pay cheque unless he can break out of his slump.

"If I don't do well the rest of April, I'm going to ask Mr. Autry (the Angels' owner) not to pay me for the month—I want to give him his money's worth," Bostock told the Los Angeles Times in an interview.

"If he (Autry) won't keep the money, I'll ask him to give it to some kind of organization that can use the money," the outfielder added.

Sonics Zap Trail Blazers

By The Associated Press

Bill Walton is back in the Portland lineup, but his presence didn't seem to bother the surprising Seattle SuperSonics.

Walton, the Trail Blazers' all-star centre, scored 17 points Tuesday night in his first game since being sidelined by a broken bone in his foot Feb. 28. But it was not enough to stop the SuperSonics who beat the Blazers 104-95 at Portland in the opening game of their National Basketball Association quarter-final playoffs.

The second game of the best-of-seven series between the Sonics, who have been one of the league's toughest clubs since recovering from a 5-17 start, and the defending champion Trail Blazers will be played in Portland Friday night.

Walton hit his first five shots and played well, but so did Seattle's young Marvin Webster, who led all scorers with 24 points, including 17 in the second half.

"It was obvious Walton's foot bothered him some," said Seattle coach Lenny Wilkens.

In other NBA playoff games Tuesday night, Denver Nuggets won the opener of their series with Milwaukee Bucks 119-103, Washington Bullets evened their series with San Antonio at 1-1 by beating the Spurs 121-117 and Philadelphia '76ers took a 2-0 lead over New York Knicks with a 119-100 victory.

Dennis Johnson added 19 points for the Sonics, 14 in the second half. Johnny Davis topped Portland with 22 points but all-star forward Maurice Lucas had just eight.

David Thompson scored 27 points to lead seven Denver players in double figures against Milwaukee.

SURF ROLLS OVER 'CAPS

ANAHEIM (AP) — Malcolm Lord scored with just 16 seconds remaining in the game to give California Surf a 1-0 victory over Vancouver Whitecaps in a North American Soccer League game before 10,602 Tuesday night.

A shot by the Surf's Anselmo Vicioso bounced off a Vancouver defender near the goal mouth, and Lord leaped high to boot a shot that dipped past the feet of Whitecaps goalie Phil Parkes.

Nordiques Trip Aeros

HOUSTON (AP) — Marc Tardif, the World Hockey Association's leading scorer in the regular season, scored his second goal of the game on a 20-foot slapshot 2:59 into overtime to lift Quebec Nordiques to a 5-4 playoff victory over Houston Aeros Tuesday night.

The triumph evened the best-of-seven WHA quarter-final series at 1-1. The series resumes Thursday night in Quebec.

The Nordiques used goals by Bob Fitchner, Real Cloutier and Paul Baxter within a three-minute span late in the third period to erase a two goal deficit and take a 4-3 lead but Morris Lukowich scored on a rebound 41 seconds remaining to force overtime.

Bruins Take Opener

NEW WESTMINSTER, B.C. (CP) — Doug Derkson scored at 15:43 of sudden-death overtime Tuesday night to give New Westminster Bruins a 5-4 victory over Flin Flon Bombers in the opening game of the Western Canada Hockey League round-robin semi-final playoff series.

New Westminster winger John Paul Kelly outmuscled a Flin Flon player for the puck and passed it Derkson who was standing alone in the slot and he fired it high to goaltender Larry Lozinski's glove side, sending 3,404 fans home happy.

The score was tied 1-1 at the end of the first period and 2-2 at the end of the second.

John Ogrodnick scored twice in the third period to give the Bruins 3-2 and 4-3 leads, but the Bombers battled back each time.

Scott MacLeod and Kent Reardon scored the other New Westminster goals, while Ray Neufeld, Steve Blue, Jordy Douglas and Glenn Hicks replied for Flin Flon.

New Westminster outshot the Bombers 78-39, but spectacular goaltending by Lozinski kept Flin Flon in the game. Richard Martens was in the New Westminster goal.

The Bruins lost Dave Orleski, their top scorer in the playoffs, with a knee injury in the second period. The Bombers, who were playing two men under the roster limit because of suspensions, lost Neufeld to an injury, also in the second period.

Next game in the series is Thursday night, when New Westminster meets Billings Bighorns at the Pacific Coliseum in Vancouver.

Jadresko Carries Island Burden

Victoria Lakehill Jadresko Construction is carrying quite a record into the sixth-division final in the 26th annual Sun Tournament of Champions.

The tourney, which consists of finals for British Columbia championships in seven juvenile soccer divisions, is scheduled for Saturday and Sunday at Royal Athletic Park.

Jadresko, the only team from Vancouver Island to make the tourney, will face South Burnaby Men's Club Royals at 12:30 p.m. Saturday.

During the regular season, Jadreskos compiled a 14-1 record with 65 goals for and 12 against. In post-season Provincial Cup play, the Victoria side is 4-0 with an impressive 20-1 goals-for-and-against margin.

Todd Boothroyd leads the scoring list with 21 goals and is followed by David Campbell (17), Paul Booth (16) and Clay Crust (14).

Jadreskos reached the seventh division final last season but lost out to Vancouver Dunbar.

"It's unfortunate that there aren't more Island clubs in the finals," said tournament director Alex Kemp of Vancouver.

"We thought there would be at least two or three as five Island clubs made it to the semi-finals. The Island zone has usually provided three or even four finalists in the past when the tournament has been held in Vancouver."

This will mark the fourth time the tourney has been staged in Victoria and the first time since 1972.

Four games are scheduled Saturday and three Sunday with the wind-up parade of champions and presentation of awards scheduled to start at 3:15 p.m. Sunday.

The feature game between Vancouver Dunbar Stongs and Coquitlam Bel-Aire Shamrocks for the first division crown is scheduled for 12:15 p.m. Sunday.

Arrowsmith Ski Area Facing Two Choices

Some rambling notes along the trail:

As expected, Arrowsmith Recreation Ltd., the outfit which runs the ski hill on Mt. Arrowsmith near Port Alberni, is in dire straits after two consecutive snowless seasons . . . Debts amount to approximately $300,000 while liquid assets total only $44,000 . . . The company now finds itself in the position of having to decide whether to liquidate or finding some means of carrying on and perhaps expanding the facilities . . . It's ironic that the area which would have been served by a second chairlift, part of the area's expansion plans, received plenty of snow during the past two years while the slopes served the the initial facilities were barren . . . Luckily there has been no pressure from the creditors to have the outstanding loans paid back, but that situation can't continue indefinitely . . . A meeting of shareholders last week rejected a liquidation motion and turned the question back to the executive for further study of alternatives . . . It would be unfortunate if the area folded, considering the amount of volunteer effort and money which has already been poured into the site.

A thought to ponder after the current reorganization of the fish and wildlife branch complete, hopefully with most of the suggestions made by consultant Bill Mair intact:

"We trained very hard — but it seemed that every time we were beginning to form into teams we would be reorginized.

"I was to learn in this life that we tend to meet any situation by reorganizing, and a wonderful method it can be for creating the illusion of progress while producing confusion, inefficiency and demoralization."

The words, penned over 2,000 years ago, are just as valid today . . . So once the branch is settled on its new course, let's let it be for awhile.

"That's the first time I've seen your mother leave the table without a second helping."

Indies Clinches Test Series Win

PORT OF SPAIN, Trinidad (Reuter) — Off-spinner Derek Parry grabbed the last five Australian wickets for 15 runs to steer the West Indies to a 198-run win in the fourth cricket test match Tuesday which clinched victory in the five-test series.

Australia, chasing a victory target of 293, was shot out for 94 in its second innings. The Aussies lasted less than three hours on a wicket which was wearing and playing low from time to time.

It was a dismal, disheartening performance by Australia. It lost its first wicket at nine, was 53 for three at lunch and then lost seven wickets in a little over an hour in the afternoon session.

Parry steered the West Indians out of trouble Monday with a magnificent 65 which allowed them to finish their second innings Tuesday on 290, after being 151 for six Monday afternoon.

In their first innings, the Indies had made 292 and then bowled out Australia for 290 to leave the match evenly balanced. It was still even when Australia went in Tuesday.

But then, as has happened often in this series, the pendulum swung and the West Indies went on to wrap up the test series with a third victory in four matches.

Football Clinic Set For Weekend

Vancouver Island Bantam Football Conference, in conjunction with the B.C. Amateur Football Association, is holding a clinic for coaches, trainers and referees Saturday and Sunday at Juan de Fuca Recreation Centre.

Frank Smith, head coach of the UBC Thunderbirds; Gary Schwertfeger, head coach of Vancouver High School and former player with B.C. Lions and Oakland Raiders; and Bill Plant, head coach of Windsor High School, will conduct the football coaching clinic got Level I certification.

Cliniticians for the trainers clinic, which takes in all sports, will be Bill Mackie of UVic, who was recently appointed national team trainer for the Commonwealth Games in Edmonton, and Wes Brunell, who trains McDonalds of the Western Canada Junior "A" Lacrosse League and the Canadian Olympic team.

Two Canadian Football League officials — Charlie Phipps and Larry Rohan — will conduct the referee's portion of the clinic.

Registration gets underway at 9:30 a.m. Saturday. There will be a $10 fee for coaches and trainers, while the referees' clinic is free.

New Leases In Denver

DENVER (AP) — Mayor Bill McNichols says both Colorado Rockies of the National Hockey League and Denver Nuggets of the National Basketball Association will be offered cheaper, but longer lease terms on McNichols Sports Arena.

McNichols said Tuesday the new proposal is being drawn up and added: "My feeling all along has been that if they would be willing to give us a commitment for a longer term, then we would be in a position to knock down some of these other things they've found objectionable."

Both teams have yearly leases with the city and Jack Vickers, owner of the Rockies, cancelled his 1978-79 season lease on Monday.

LINESMAN SUSPENDED FOR $1 BET

CALGARY (CP) — Minor hockey linesman Paddy McMahon has been suspended for the balance of the 1977-78 season according to the Alberta Hockey Referees Association.

McMahon, 19, was suspended after allegedly being involved in $1 bet on a city midget playoff game in late March.

The decision will allow McMahon to resume officiating next year.

Gov't Urged To Protect Hockey's Future

EDMONTON (CP) — Mayor Cec Purves says the federal government must protect the future of professional hockey in Canada's three World Hockey Association cities.

Purves says that message was given to Iona Campagnolo, federal minister for fitness and amateur sport, by the mayors of Edmonton, Winnipeg and Quebec City at a meeting in Ottawa Friday.

Unless Ottawa uses its leverage to maintain hockey as the country's national sport, Purves told a news conference on Monday, Edmonton, Winnipeg and Quebec City could one day "be left out in the cold."

The mayors outlined their cities' needs for federal financial assistance in operating WHA arenas.

Purves said Mrs. Campanolo indicated "the doors are not closed to federal funds."

She told the mayors that she will push for extension of the Loto Canada lottery beyond 1979 to raise money for sports assistance.

Quebec City is seeking federal funds for a 5,000-seat arena addition while Winnipeg is exploring the possibility of building a new facility.

Edmonton wants $3.7 million to cover debts from construction of the Edmonton Coliseum as part of Ottawa's commitment to the 1978 Commonwealth Games. Purves said discussions with Mrs. Campagnolo are continuing in an effort to arrange financing for the debts.

"Professional hockey is at a crossroads," he said. "If we don't make a move now to entrench hockey as a national sport we could lose it."

Purves said an economic war exists between the WHA and National Hockey League which could ultimately destroy hockey in Canada.

OPERATING COSTS SOAR

EDMONTON (CP) — Operating costs for the 1978 Commonwealth Games may be $2 million higher than estimated last June, says Maury Van Vliet, Commonwealth Games Foundation president.

The foundation is encountering slight over-runs in opera ing costs, Dr. Van Vliet told a group of visiting British journalists last week.

He said the operating budget, listed at $14.6 million last June, may reach $16.5 million when revised figures are released within a week.

Forest Near Title

LONDON (Reuter) — Nottingham Forest is only one point away from English Soccer's First Division championship following a 1-0 home win over Queen's Park Rangers Tuesday night.

With 58 points from 37 matches, Forest needs only a single point from its remaining five games to clinch the title.

The only goal came from the penalty shot. Archie Gemmill was brought down in the goal area in the 31st minute and John Robertson scored from the spot.

For Rangers, the defeat could mean relegation to the Second Division. With 29 points from 38 matches, they are fourth from the bottom of the table and in trouble.

Liverpool's remote chance of catching Forest virtually disappeared when it was held to a 2-2 draw at home by Ipswich Town.

This gives Liverpool 48 points from 37 games. To draw level with Forest on points, it would have to win its remaining five matches while the Nottingham club lost all theirs.

Only brilliant goalkeeping by Ray Clemence enabled Liverpool to draw with Cup finalists Ipswich. Kenny Dalglish and Graeme Souness scored for Liverpool and Trevor Whymark and Mick Lambert for Ipswich.

The struggle for promotion from the Second Division intensified when Malcolm Poskett scored a hat-trick for Brighton in a 4-0 victory on Bristol Rovers ground. Meanwhile, Bolton Wanderers took over top spot from Tottenham Hotspur with a 2-0 win over Crystal Place.

Frank Worthington and Neil Whatmore scored in the last 20 minutes to put them two points clear at the top.

London clubs Millwall and Orient, deep in the relegation zone, both scored valuable wins. Millwall beat Sunderland 3-1 and Orient defeated Burnley 3-0.

Hereford United will drop from the third division to the fourth after a 1-0 defeat at Rotherham. United's fate was sealed by a 73rd minute penalty scored by Dick Finney.

THOMPSON GETS RECORD HOOP PACT

DENVER (AP) — Denver Nuggets have reached tentative agreement with superstar David Thompson on a new multi-year contract reported to be in the range of $800,000 a year for five years, officials of the National Basketball Association team said Tuesday.

"The agreement will, to be best of my knowledge, make him the highest paid player in the NBA," said Carl Scheer, president and general manager of the Nuggets.

Good news for hearing aid wearers.

Activair™ lasts twice as long as the battery you're using.

New Activair hearing aid batteries operate on a new principle. The air around us activates the battery and starts it producing electric current.

But the air doesn't get into the battery until you peel it off the protective seal in the battery pack.

That's when it starts working. So it starts fresh, and lasts longer. Twice as long as the conventional batteries you're using now. Buy Activair next time you need batteries.

NO PROOF SPUR LOST MONEY

CTC Man Scolds CNR

A member of the Canadian Transport Commission's rail transport committee blasted Canadian National Railways officials Tuesday for failing to provide satisfactory proof that the company incurred a loss last year in operating the 1.4-mile Saanich Spur serving several businesses in Saanich.

David Jones, the single panel member hearing the CNR application to close the line, told company representatives their lack of data preparation made him question whether it was worth the cost of flying himself and his staff from Ottawa for the hearing.

"I have no jurisdiction to hear this application if you can't provide witnesses to vouch for the accuracy of statements made here," he said.

"The burden is on you to prove your case."

Jones ordered that each of the submissions be rechecked and the commission satisfied the information is correct before a new date for the hearing is scheduled.

The Saanich Spur runs northeastward from the main line near the Douglas-Trans Canada intersection to the Quadra-McKenzie area.

Saanich Ald. Ian Cass presented a municipal brief opposing the closure, which he claimed would affect existing and planned industry in Saanich and prejudice future planning for possible light transit use.

Task Force Urged To Save Downtown

Recreation and Conservation Minister Sam Bawlf today urged Victoria businessmen to establish a task force to promote construction of a third major department store or shopping complex in the downtown core.

Victoria City must grow or die, he told the annual meeting of the Downtown Victoria Association at The Empress.

Bawlf said the provincial government will co-operate with the task force to find a suitable site for a third department store downtown to complement Eaton's and The Bay.

Bawlf said the Provincial Capital Commission which he heads has 100 acres of land in the city and has a major stake in the economic viability of the downtown area.

Unless a third department store is established downtown, there will be a continuing trend toward expansion in the outlying areas. The economy of the downtown core will suffer and the tax base of Victoria City will erode.

"A representative should go to the mayor today to establish this task force," he said. "It should be a co-operative effort and we will be pleased to help in any way we can."

Bawlf said that, in the event no department store is interested, a new major shopping complex should be created that would have the same economic impact.

He said all downtown businesses and organizations have a stake in continued growth and a task force should be established immediately.

Bawlf made the comments after reviewing progress to date in harbor redevelopment.

Bawlf said tenders will be called April 24 to extend the Black Ball wharf and to construct a marina at the foot of Bastion Square. Completion date for both projects is set for July 1.

He said both projects should be completed on time.

Work will soon begin on dismantling the Black Ball terminal but whether it would be completed by summer depended upon the attitude of city hall towards the use of explosives.

He said if permission is given to blast, there will be no problem about completing the demolition by July 1. The first of the tall ships is expected to reach Victoria July 21 (although there will be two Japanese tall ships visiting Victoria in June as a race preview.)

Bawlf said the latest suggestions for the former Causeway gas station site are a building to house the Maritime Museum and the Visitors Information Centre. The present Causeway tourist bureau should be removed because of congestion on Government St. Plans for the site are still in the discussion stage.

Removal of the Black Ball terminal building will open up the whole vista of the harbor, he said. The building will be removed and landscaping will be done but it will still look like a timber dock.

The promendade will be completed by summer so Victorians and visitors can walk along the water from Laurel Point to the foot of Bastion Square.

AirWest and other seaplane services will be moved to the water immediately north of the present Coho wharf.

Meanwhile, a temporary building will be constructed for the Coho near the Marguerite dock and a permanent Coho terminal will be constructed starting in the fall, if the present schedule is met.

To accommodate the Coho, the Undersea Gardens will have to be moved forward.

max low

Barely had I finished reading a delightful article in Atlas Magazine on the joys of being impossible when someone asked me if I'd tried boffing.

Not lately, I replied.

How about tweezli-whop or hunker hawser?

Finally I had to admit I hadn't the faintest idea what he was talking about and that led to a discovery trek to the University of Victoria.

There in a small lounge next to the McKinnon Gym, Jeff McKay and Burton Naiditch from the New Games Foundation in San Francisco explained a thing or two at a press conference.

They are here to introduce the concept of New Games to Canada and are conducting a two-day training session today and Thursday, ending with a tournament to which the public is invited from 2 to 4 p.m. Thursday.

What on earth are New Games? Well, some of them are, in fact, new games while others are old games rediscovered or remodelled. The difference is all in the approach.

"New Games began as a large festival in San Francisco in 1973," Naiditch said while showing slides to the media, to members of the university's athletics department and to officials of the fitness branch of the provincial ministry of recreation and conservation, who are co-sponsoring the two-day leadership clinic.

(Peter Grant, a field representative with the department, Colin Campbell, who said the government was excited by the concept of people who haven't been reached in other ways being turned on to fitness, and Wendy Robertson, the department's fitness co-ordinator who will take the New Games idea around the rest of B.C., were there).

"Since it started, New Games has spread to schools and parks," Naiditch said.

"The Foundation, a non-profit organization in San Franciso, began in 1975 and at the third New Games Festival there were 10,000 people in one day.

"But you don't have to have 10,000 people at a festival to enjoy New Games. It can be 100 people or 10 people in a park.

"The idea is of taking part, of trying to set an atmosphere of people who play hard, feel challenged but don't mind who wins or loses.

"The nicest thing about New Games is that it encourages all kinds of people to join in — people who never thought of themselves as athletes but end up enjoying themselves, anyway."

"Our training session will concentrate on how to use what people you have and to decide what game they'd like to play," explained McKay. "Rather than saying 'Here's a game, fit in or take a walk!' Or having people make a big thing about choosing teams (where one person is always the last to be chosen) or players being eliminated."

A former athlete — a college baseball and football player — Jeff McKay found New Games a real learning experience when he got into them five years ago. Now he's a trainer and believes there's nothing better for fitness and participation whether you are athletically inclined or not.

"There can be winners and losers," he said. "It's just that the consequences of losing aren't so serious. I mean, if you knock me off balance, so what? Which doesn't mean I'm not going to try like crazy!"

If you go up to UVic between 2 and 4 on Thursday, you don't have to be there as a spectator. In fact, they earnestly hope you'll be there to take part.

You can play with giant kites or the huge earth ball or join in a game of ultimate nerf ball — a kind of cross between rugby and frisbee throwing.

Well, what about tweezli-whop (a variation of the old pillow fight while sitting astride a horizontal pole) or hunker hawser (basically a game of tug 'o war on logs)? Sure, they'll be all going on, said Jeff.

And what about boffing?

"That's a sort of fencing with styrofoam rods where people can really belt each other without hurting anyone — soft war at its best," he added with a grin.

There are many more. Best thing is to go and see what you can discover for your family to share in.

See you there . . .

$5,000 Voted 'Park' Study

Saanich council's lands, planning and housing committee authorized Mayor Mel Couvelier Tuesday night to spend up to $5,000 on a comprehensive study of the site he has recommended for development as a light industrial park.

The mayor said the investigation could take two to three weeks and meanwhile he still cannot identify the specific location which is being considered.

Wherever it is — and there is speculation that the land is in the general area west of Roy Road — the site obviously occupies extensive acreage because Couvelier presented it recently as an alternative to the 128-acre Royal Oak industrial park proposal which council turned down last month.

Couvelier said today the expenditure authorized by the committee at its in-camera session will provide a detailed investigation covering many aspects, including assessments of land and servicing costs, terms of sale of the properties in question and the cash flow required from Saanich.

Car Sales Increasing After Cutback in Tax

Car sales are starting to pick up in Victoria following the reduction in the provincial sales tax from seven to five per cent.

"We have already noticed an increase in sales," Ford dealer Peter Pollen said.

"This might be due to the good weather or the sales tax cut, it's hard to know what caused it. Sales have increased in the past week."

Pollen said taxes are the main contributor to inflation and any tax reduction will help keep prices under control.

Douglas Sim of Cornell Chevrolet Oldsmobile Ltd. said car buyers and sellers are smiling following the tax reduction.

Sim said the reduction is welcome but Ottawa should also reduce the 11 per cent federal sales tax charged at the manufacturer's level.

Ken Little of Eaton's said the sales tax should help sales of furniture and heavy appliances this spring.

He said his company has been running a sale since the sales tax cut and business is brisk but it is not clear whether the tax reduction is a major factor.

He said furniture sales have been slow across Canada and the sales tax reduction should encourage more purchases of large items.

"The sales tax becomes significant when large sums are involved."

Woodward Stores Victoria manager F.D. Smith said business has been good in mid-April but there was no great upsurge.

$70,000 Loss When Truck Flips

The loss is estimated at about $70,000 after a large tractor trailer loaded with plywood jack-knifed on the Trans-Canada Highway near the entrance to Goldstream park Tuesday.

Colwood RCMP said today driver Ronald Gary Horwood, 27, of 820 Sayward, lost control of the 18-wheel rig when the load shifted as he rounded a curve.

The truck slid across the road into the oncoming lane and flipped over on its side sending fuel and plywood on to the pavement.

Horwood escaped injury.

The accident occurred at 5.30 p.m. and traffic on the highway was reduced to a crawl for nearly three hours

Three Charged After Raid

Two men and woman will appear in provincial court April 26 after police raided a home in Colwood and seized about $6,000 worth of stolen property.

The raid was carried out Monday night by members of the Greater Victoria Joint Forces Operation of the Co-ordinated Law Enforcement Unit.

The three, whose names have not been released, have been charged with possession of stolen property.

A police spokesman said today the items seized included motorcycles and chainsaws, as well as a firearm and a number of blasting caps and wiring.

The goods were stolen in the Greater Victoria area over the past couple of months.

Sidney Ferry Run Okayed

A plan to continue limited ferry service from Anacortes to Sidney was approved Tuesday by the Washington State Transportation Commission.

The commission will shift vessels on other runs to free a 100-car ferry for use on the run to Vancouver Island.

The commission had been trying to buy or lease a foreign ship to use on the run, but decided against the idea because it would have been too costly.

The future of the run had been in doubt after the commission's predecessor voted to eliminate the service to free an extra ferry for use on Puget Sound commuter runs.

Richard Berg, ferries director, said the present arrangement will probably be continued until late next year when six new ferries on order are delivered.

Milk in Diet - Economically

hilda beastall

FOOD & nutrition

Milk for the daily diet has received as much publicity from government nutritionists as fruits and vegetables in the past few years, but too few homemakers realize that milk products come under the heading of "milk" in these recommendations.

One hears the comment that either the kids or the husband will not drink milk; frequently both, because youngsters easily pick up food habits from parents. And more often the homemaker, if a woman, never thinks of drinking milk because it will put on weight.

There is fat in milk to be sure, but there is skim milk to buy as a liquid, or much more cheaply to buy as instant or non-instant skim milk powder. This is one of the cheap sources of protein available to all income brakets of households.

And there are a number of milk products which can be bought, or better still some can be made at home even more delicious, economical and nutritious. Yogurt is the easiest and most beneficial in my opinion, to all ages.

Most available and good for daily use are Cheddar cheese in its bulk form, plain yogurt without flavoring or coloring, dry cottage cheese, butter and buttermilk — all are milk products. All except the dry cottage cheese and buttermilk contain the fat of the whole milk; yogurt made at home can have a low fat content by using powdered skim milk for three-quarters of the total liquid.

With thought in planning meals, each meal contains the essentials of milk in some form yet need be neither elaborate nor expensive even with the increases in powdered milk said to be expected.

A 35-year-old cookbook put out by a canned milk company before the end of the Second World War is filled as might be expected with methods to use milk as a protein extender.

In that period of meat rationing (allowances were low by today's consumption figures) I recall few if any complaints about the shortage of meat; we turned to other good sources of nutrition, enjoyed them, and probably ate a lot less than today.

This recipe book turned up at a used book sale a few years ago, and has been of interest for its many fine ideas for meatless meals using cheese, eggs, the more common vegetables and fruits; and small amounts of meat extended by other food ingredients to increase protein, mineral and calory levels for normal active adults.

An appetizing looking supper dish that will use slices of stale bread if you have them, is capable of being adjusted either for eight or for two servings. For two, make in two small baking dishes; those glazed brown oven dishes sold as "onion soups" are just right.

And make this dish when using the oven heat for other baking to save on energy fuel.

CHEESE BAKE

4 slices wholewheat bread
Softened margarine
1 tsp. finely chopped chives
1 Tbsp. wheat germ
4 small eggs (or 3 medium)
¾ tsp. salt
¾ cup skim milk powder
1 cup hot water
½ cup grated Cheddar cheese
Dry mustard, paprika.

Spread each slice of bread with softened margarine; sprinkle with chives and wheat germ. Place two slices in bottom of greased 6x10-inch baking dish. Spread with half the grated cheese; sprinkle with mustard and paprika.

Place the next two slices of prepared bread over first two; layer the cheese, sprinkled with mustard and paprika.

Add hot water to milk powder; beat in the eggs and pour while hot over the bread. Let stand 15 minutes.

Preheat oven to moderate 177 deg. C. Bake for 20 minutes; turn off oven if not using for other baking. Leave dish in for another 10 minutes until custard is set and top is browned.

Serves 4; with cooked frozen peas; or carrots and green turnip tops from garden.

This dish is just as good next day either at room temperature or heated slightly in a skillet. Do not bring to cooking point or it will be spoiled.

Escalloped Potatoes are an old favorite for they have the additional protein of milk, and in the following recipe, canned sweet corn, and a little grated Cheddar cheese. Another supper dish.

ESCALLOPED POTATOES

3 medium potatoes, peeled and sliced
6 Tbsp. water
½ cup skim milk powder
1 medium onion OR
1 Tbsp. chopped chives
Salt and paprika
½ cup canned sweet corn
Wholewheat bread crumbs
1 Tbsp. wheat germ
1 Tbsp. grated Cheddar cheese.

Into a medium sized greased casserole put a layer of raw potato. Add the water mixed with milk powder.

Add a layer of thinly sliced onion; sprinkle lightly with salt and paprika, and half the canned corn.

Bake in moderate oven 177 deg. C. for 50 minutes, then turn off heat (if no other baking in oven) and leave in for 10 minutes more.

With cooked beets and steamed cabbage this makes a supper for three or four, full of flavor and satisfying because the ingredients are all useful for replacing energy expended by active people.

In the next recipe, soy beans team with cheese, eggs, and wheat in the bread to form another hearty evening meal. With this serve raw green salad topped with homemade low-fat yogurt.

SOY BEAN ROAST

2 cups cooked soy beans
1 cup Cheddar cheese
1 Tbsp. chopped chives
¾ tsp. salt
¼ tsp. paprika
2 small eggs, beaten
1 cup wholewheat breadcrumbs
¼ cup wheat germ
1 Tbsp. margarine.

Put drained cooked beans, and the cheese through coarse grinder. Mix with chives, seasoning and eggs. Pack into small greased casserole. Top with breadcrumbs and wheat germ, dotted with margarine.

Bake in moderate oven 177 deg. C. for one hour until browned, turning off heat for last 10 minutes.

Serve with canned tomatoes, or with fresh ripe tomatoes in season. Will serve 4.

These recipes will give ideas for still other uses of milk products as acceptable sources of nutrition with other food ingredients.

No need to panic. Just try this combination

Important Dinner? Handle It with Ease

There comes a time in every woman's life when she is called upon to plan and produce dinner for eight. A dinner, that is. Sit-down, best linen, finest china, polished silver.

No buffet will do for this company. This is a talk-with and-to affair. Maybe it's for the prospective parents-in-law of your son; or for the personnel man who has his eye on your man.

Everything must be easy, in the sense of being at ease. You, the son, the husband, the time-table, everything. But especially you. Planning will do this. Select a main course that gets better if it has to wait half an hour or more. Important decisions have a way of coming up just when you're set to set out the food. And choose a dish that doesn't bankrupt the budget. This will put you at ease more than you suspect.

Above all, prepare a main dish that has character. Meaning flavor, taste, importance. Clip and save these two recipes. The flavor comes from the blend of rare and exotic spieces — bitters. And the importance comes from the flavor — and from your imagination in planning to give your company a dish that is uncommon, sophisticated, and strangely and excitingly delicious.

BEEF BECHAMEL

500 ml (2 cups) onions, thinly sliced
63 ml (¼ cup) butter
1,344 gm (3 lbs.) round steak, cut into bite-sized pieces
125 ml (½ cup) flour
375 ml (1½ cups) water
5 ml (1 tsp.) paprika
15 ml (1 tbsp.) salt
1.25 ml (¼ tsp.) marjoram
1.25 ml (¼ tsp.) thyme
500 ml (2 cups) commercial sour cream
250 ml (1 cup) sliced mushrooms, saute'ed
15 ml (1 tbsp.) aromatic bitters

Saute' onions in butter until transparent; remove from pan. Dust beef with flour and brown in butter in same pan on all sides. Add onions, water and seasonings. Cover and simmer slowly for 1½ hours, or until tender, adding more water if necessary. At serving time, add sour cream, mushrooms and aromatic bitters. Heat together thoroughly but do not boil. Served with Browned Rice.

Makes 8 servings.

BROWNED RICE

83 ml (⅓ cup) butter
500 ml (2 cups) raw rice
560 gm (2 cans, 10-oz.) consomme'
500 ml (2 cups) water
5 ml (1 tsp.) salt
10 ml (2 tsp.) aromatic bitters

Melt butter in large fry pan. Add raw rice and brown, stirring constantly. Add Consomme', water, salt and aromatic bitters. Cover and simmer over low heat for about 30 minutes until rice is tender and liquid is absorbed. Garnish with parsley.

Makes 8 servings.

Barley Casserole

1 cup pot barley
½ cup butter or margarine
1 cup finely chopped onion
1 cup chicken broth (or canned consomme or broth from boiling beef tongue or heart)
¼ lb. fresh mushrooms washed and sliced
¼ to ½ cup shaved almonds
½ to 1 tsp. salt
⅛ tsp. pepper

In a large pot saute the onion in the butter or margarine until limp, then add mushrooms, salt and pepper and cook 1 minute longer. Remove from heat and add broth and barley. Mix well and turn into buttered casserole and store covered in refrigerator overnight for 24 hours.

Two hours before mealtime bake covered at 350 deg. Fahr. for 1½ hours, then remove from oven, stir in almonds (adding a little water if barley seems dry), cover and bake ½ hour longer.

Well-Marbled Rib Roast: Good to the Last Nibble tiny bennett

As a matter of sensible economy, I usually buy inexpensive cuts of beef for roasting, with a preference for blades that now and then are on special at 89¢ a pound.

Recently however, I decided that I should deal with a more standard cut, so I bought a very large standing rib roast to see if we were missing anything by concentrating on the cheaper cuts.

This is one of the most popular beef roasts, because not only is it beautifully succulent and tasty, it can also be roasted rare, medium-rare, or (horrors) well-done and come to the table nicely tender. One reason for this is that the meat is well-marbled with fat and by self-basting assists in the cooking. And this makes such a cut a good safe bet for entertaining with some good leftover tricks that turn out meals as prime as the original.

Prime (standing) rib roasts — the names seem interchangeable — should have the bones trimmed, to facilitate easy carving, and in the roasting it is essential to keep things simple. With such a flavorful piece of meat, all that is needed is to rub on freshly ground black pepper, prop the meat up on its bone ends in a roasting pan, and pop into an oven preheated to a high of 450 degrees.

This is the searing method of starting in a hot oven to 'sieze' the meat for exactly 30 minutes, when the heat is reduced to 325 for the rest of the cooking period.

As I have explained before, ovens vary considerably, so the only sensible advice on timing I can give here is based upon a general average to be used as a guide. And in the searing method this means 12 minutes per pound for rare, (meat thermometer 120-125) 15 minutes per pound medium, (meat thermometer 140) and a few minutes more per pound for well-done which I don't recommend.

That timing per pound is at best an estimate, designed to bring the roast to the ready stage in time for the planned meal hour, but it is rather essential to use a meat thermometer with the tip buried deep in the muscle and not touching a bone. And all beef roasts should be allowed 10 minutes 'resting' outside the oven to facilitate easier carving.

(This resting allows the tissue to settle and firm up and is best done on a serving meat platter, with a loose hood of aluminum foil tented over to help keep it hot.)

My prime rib roast was so large there was lots left over and I don't mind this. First a bigger roast cooks better than a small one and not only is rare cold beef a joy in itself, I work a couple of tricks with some nice thick, boneless slices and then on the very meaty bones.

ROAST BEEF REDBRIDGE

Cut a thick slice of cold prime rib cooked beef for each in the family and heat in a big skillet two tbs. butter and two tbs. olive oil.

When this blends, saute four green onions cut into tiny rings and saute the beef slices so they are beautifully browned on each side. Holding the meat slices in place, pour away the excess fat, shake the pan and pour in one cup dry red wine and when it ceases to foam add one cup beef broth, shake and allow to simmer away until reduced by half.

The beef is then served with vegetables, including a baked potato, and the thickened gravy poured over the beef as a sauce. You can make this dish with any roast beef and it is extra good if you start with rare roast beef slices.

When I carve a prime rib roast, I cheat by leaving the bones all in one hunk, and by cutting down on the inside curve of the bones to leave a generous segment of that lovely inner meat attached. The reason for this is that I adore deviled beef bones, a much-beloved treat in England, especially in those famed London beef restaurants that go through huge quantities of prime rib roasts every day.

DEVILED BEEF BONES

Cut apart a set of cold roast prime rib bones, leaving lots of meat on them, and bring up to room temperature.

Melt one cup butter. In a shallow dish mix together two cups fine breadcrumbs, one tsp. Tabasco, one tsp. salt, one tsp. black pepper and one tsp. dry English-type mustard powder (that's hot).

Using light kitchen tongs, drench each bone in turn in the melted butter, roll around in the seasoned crumbs, lace in a broiler pan and at five inches from the heat, broil and turn, until the bones are crisp and brown on all sides.

Then serve with rice simmered up with finely sliced onions, diced celery and frozen peas added and cooked in the rice liquor, BEFORE the rice is added. A sort of an easy-going pilaf. Remember the count? Two cups chicken stock (or two-cups water plus two chicken cubes) salt and one cup long-grain rice. Add rice when liquor boils, clamp on lid and cook on lowest heat for 30 minutes.

MAESTRO COCKTAIL

1 celery stalk
2 cups tomato juice
2 cups clam juice
¼ cup lemon juice
1 teaspoon onion salt
⅛ teaspoon liquid red-pepper seasoning

Cut celery into 1-inch pieces; put in blender container with tomato juice. Cover and whirl until smooth; pour into pitcher. Stir in remaining ingredients. Chill until ready to serve. Yields 6 to 8 servings.

Potatoes Aren't the Culprits

By RUTH FREMES and ZAK SABRY

Wherever did it come from — that myth that some foods are fattening while others are not?

Everyone's heard it — "I've just gone on a diet. Haven't had bread or potatoes for a week." When anyone says this to us, we try to explain that these foods are the wrong ones to remove from any diet plan.

Poor maligned bread and potatoes. In themselves, they are low in calories and high in nutritive value.

Perhaps our figures can do something to bring these nutritious foods back into the prominence they deserve.

MENU

salad of greens with dressing	100 cal.
6 oz. sirloin steak	660 cal.
baked potato	90 cal.
green beans	15 cal.
total calories	970 cal.

The potato is 1/10 the total calories of the meal. Why drop that? It would be better to cut the steak in half . . . for a saving of 330 calories.

The source of calories in the potato and steak is different too. A steak comes with plenty of fat calories. The potato is almost fat free. With increasing medical concern about fat in our diets, these considerations are important.

Then, again, take an open face cream cheese sandwich. The whole wheat bread is 72 calories, 2 ounces of cream cheese are 210 calories for a total calorie count on the sandwich of 282. The bread in the sandwich is ¼ total calories.

The comparison can be carried further to the breakfast table. ½ cup of cooked oatmeal has twice as much protein as an 8 ounce cup of unsweetened corn flakes — and 15 fewer calories too. That's without the milk in either cereal.

If you're cutting calories, don't drop the oatmeal, switch from whole to skim milk.

Oatmeal with 8 ounces of skim milk — 145 calories

Oatmeal with 8 ounces of whole milk — 225 calories

Most people know that skim has fewer calories than whole milk. They know too that it's not the potatoes or bread but what you dollop on them like sour cream and butter that add the girth. We assume that most people know this because it is repeated so often. It bears repeating. We have written about the many joys and health advantages of eating bread, cereals and potatoes but there remains a resistance to the calories.

Perhaps figures speak louder than words. Perhaps these figures will tell the story of the low calories, and quality of bread and potatoes. We hope so.

QUESTIONS

Dear Ruth & Zak:

Could you answer the two following questions for me as I have puzzled over them everytime I visit a supermarket.

1) The nitrites that are used in cured meats such as bacon and luncheon meats are supposedly cancer causing. I switched to canned luncheon meats instead of vacuum packed in the belief that these are nitrite free but find that this is not so. I could make my own sandwich fillings with roast beef and chicken, but does this meat also contain the nitrites?

2) There is color added to some cheeses, jelly powders, eggbread, margarine and pudding mixes. Is there any color added to cocoa?

Mrs. H.H., Islington, Ont.

Dear Mrs. H.H.:

The amount of nitrites allowed in meat has been reduced to what is considered a safe level. In our opinion, no one should eat any foods so often as to make them a regular occurrence . . . i.e. bacon or cured meats everyday. If you have them occasionally, perhaps once a week, you reduce the risk . . . (if in fact, there is one). These foods are high in fat, in any case, it would be best to use them sparingly. Roast beef and chicken are nitrite free.

In answer to the second part of your question, any color that is added to foods must be mentioned on the label. No labelling-no coloring.

Dear Ruth & Zak:

You mentioned in your column about homemade bread that you could raise in the microwave oven. We would like to know the method and time by which you do this.

Mrs. E.C., Edmonton, Alta.

Dear Mrs. E.C.:

Microwave cooking is a very different method of cooking from the traditional. It takes times and trouble to learn how to use a microwave properly, but we believe that the effort is worthwhile. The newer models allow you to proof bread because they have a level of power generation that is low enough to warm the yeast without cooking the bread. If you have a low setting on your microwave, you can "proof" or raise the dough. Check in your instruction book because any microwave cookbook should have a recipe for bread making. If not, you'll have to experiment. Take it easy at first. Set the oven at it's lowest setting. Cover and cook the kneaded bread dough for 3 minutes. Rotate the bowl. Try it for another 3 minutes. Test the dough for the heat. Return to the oven and keep cooking gently, one minute at a time, until you establish the time for raising the dough in your oven. For 6½ cups of flour in the recipe for white bread that we tried, the oven was on the very lowest setting for 10 minutes after the first kneading; ditto for the second rise after the loaves had been shaped.

Things You Can Do With Beef Heart

QUESTION: You often mention beef heart. What do you do with it? It is so cheap! Joyce B.

ANSWER: I boil it and slice it and serve it with Sweet 'n' Sour Sauce; I slice it and serve it as I would boiled beef; I slice it cold and serve it as an item on a meat platter of cold cuts; I use it sliced for sandwiches.

BOILED BEEF HEART

½ beef heart (1½ to 2 lbs.)
3 cups water
1 tsp. salt
2 bay leaves
1 small onion, sliced

Trim fat and arteries and sinews from heart and put in a pot. Add all remaining ingredients, bring to boil, reduce heat to simmer for 5 hours. Serve sliced hot or cold.

SWEET 'N' SOUR SLICED BEEF HEART

3¼ to 3½-lb. beef heart
1 small onion chopped (first amount)
1 bay leaf
1½ tsp. salt

Sauce:

2 tbsp. margarine
½ green pepper chopped
1 small onion, chopped (second amount)
2 tbsp. corn starch
2 cups broth from cooking heart (see below)
2 tbsp. lemon juice
3 tbsp. sugar
½ tsp. salt
½ tsp. curry powder

Be sure to trim all fat and connective membranes from top of heart and put heart on to cook in large pot with the first onion, bay leaf and 1½ teaspoons salt in water to ¾ cover. Bring to boil, reduce heat to simmer, cover and simmer 5½ hours, turning heart over once at halftime.

Near mealtime make the Sweet 'n' Sour Sauce by melting the margarine in a medium-sized frying pan. Add the green pepper and onion and saute gently 5 minutes. Stir in the corn starch and then add 2 cups of the strained broth in which heart was simmered, lemon juice, sugar, ½ teaspoon salt and curry powder until thick. Simmer gently, stirring 5 minutes.

At mealtime put the cooked heart on a cutting board and with razor sharp knife cut it ever so neatly into ¼" thick slices and arrange these overlapping on preheated large platter. Just as you call everyone to dinner pour the boiling hot sweet 'n' sour sauce over. Garnish with parsley and carry to table. We served ours with mashed potatoes and shoestring strips of buttered carrots. A beautiful and popular meal.

DEAR ABBY: I have just observed a group of "unselfish" church women preparing for a church rummage sale, the proceeds of which will go to charity. Almost every good item donated by someone from this group was snapped up by another member of the group. Of course, they pay for these items, but a typical conversation was, "Say, who marked this lamp five dollars? The shade is soiled!"

Then someone would reply, "I did. I paid $65 for it new — but mark it whatever you want and take it."

Then the other woman would mark it a dollar and promptly cart it off to her car.

Understand, Abby, these volunteers are not charity cases themselves. They are well-to-do society women. Do you think it is fair of them to skim the cream off the top that way? Hundreds of dollars could have been added to the proceeds if it weren't for this kind of thing. I welcome your remarks and you may sign me . . .

APPALLED

DEAR APPALLED: The volunteers should have been told that such shenanigans are tantamount to taking money out of the cash register. Why didn't you speak up? Silence implies approval.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "YOUNG PHILOSOPHER": Wisdom does not automatically come with old age. Nothing does — except wrinkles. It's true, wine improves with age. But only if the grapes were good in the first place.

DEAR ABBY: First let me explain that mine is not a "have to" wedding. "Tony" (made-up name) and I have been engaged since last Christmas. The problem is I just found out that I'm three months pregnant and my wedding is four months off. I know I probably shouldn't wear a white gown and veil, but I already bought mine and if I can get into it, I plan to wear it.

I haven't told anybody except Tony, but I may have to tell my mother because I feel rotten in the morning and she may guess the reason. Abby, would it be okay to go ahead and have a big church wedding like I planned? (We would tell people later that the baby was premature.)

Please rush your answer to me as I am nervous and confused. Sign me — BLOWING UP.

DEAR BLOWING: Under the circumstances, I would suggest a simple wedding — and soon! Don't count on fooling anyone who can count to nine — least of all the clergyman who will officiate at your wedding and will be called upon shortly thereafter to baptize the baby.

City Police Dogs Eyed

Victoria police Chief Jack Gregory was asked by Mayor Mike Young today to confer with the Saanich police department over plans to establish a dog squad in the Greater Victoria area.

Gregory had told the police board that the B.C. police commission has said it would be willing to try and get $10,000 from the provincial government to train dogs and their masters for police work in the Greater Victoria region.

The police chief also said Saanich is looking at the possibility of getting four dog teams.

Currently the only police dog readily available is located at the Colwood RCMP detachment.

Young said it would be wasteful for area municipalities to duplicate services in this area and suggested Gregory discuss the matter with Saanich.

"Undoubtedly this is something that should be a joint force effort," he said.

Dealing with another matter, the board decided to put off a discussion on the possibility of Victoria adopting a team policing system for several weeks at least.

Some committee members indicated they would be too busy during the remainder of April and May to deal with the matter.

"I have a feeling it's going to take a lot of work to figure out which way we go on this," said Young.

ALBERNI IWA PICKETS

PORT ALBERNI (CP) — Pickets turned back about 1,400 loggers at four MacMillan Bloedel Ltd. operations here today to protest suspensions made Tuesday by the company.

Picketing was not sanctioned by union officials.

The pickets were protesting the suspension Tuesday of five workers at the Shoemaker Bay sorting grounds at Sproat Lake. A company spokesman said they were suspended for slowing down the operation.

Earl Foxcroft, president of IWA Local 185, said the five were suspended for 13 days each and two-day suspensions were later handed out to most of the rest of the sorting ground crew when they walked off in protest.

PLAQUES TO MARK COOK'S LANDFALL

Four cabinet ministers will go to to Resolution Cove aboard HMCS Mackenzie for the unveiling of two brass plaques to commemorate the 200th anniversary of the arrival of Capt. James Cook.

Travel Minister Grace McCarthy heads the party which also includes Recreation and Conservation Minister Sam Bawlf, Health Minister Bob McClelland, Forest Minister Tom Waterland, Atlin MLA Frank Calder, and deputy provincial secretary Gerald Cross.

The plaques will be installed April 26 at Resolution Cove on Bligh Island to mark the spot where Cook spent a month repairing his ships.

One plaque is being dedicated jointly by the provincial and Nootka Sound Bicentennial committees; the other by the Maritime Operations Branch of the Canadian Armed Forces. The latter will be unveiled by Mackenzie's skipper, Capt. K.H. Knox.

Police Hire Two Women

Two women are among five new recruits signed up by the Victoria police department, the police board was told today.

Hydro Talk 'Progress'

VANCOUVER (CP) — Union spokesman Al Ashton says significant progress was made Tuesday in negotiations with B.C. Hydro.

Ashton, president of division 101-134 of the Amalgamated Transit Union, said another meeting was underway today and saidother meetings would be arranged on a daily basis.

"Both sides are hopeful a settlement is near."

The union launched a full-scale strike against Hydro March 13, but then called it off a week later because of picketing problems and failure to put sufficient economic pressure on the Crown corporation.

Instead, the union opted for on-the-job harassment of Hydro operations in co-operation with two other unions also fighting contract battles with the corporation — the Office and Technical Employees Union and the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, representing Hydro gas workers.

'I was framed.'

'Even I can frame a picture.' Barry Bowman, C-FAX 1070 personality. Listen to him every day from 6 am-10 am.

'When the agency phoned me to do this job I was pretty pleased. Until I found out they were looking for the most unhandyman they could find. They wanted to show you folks that anyone can frame a picture. Even me...Mr. Thumbs. Well, of course I can frame a picture. And I had a lot of fun doing it too. The guys at Pandora helped a little bit. They did all the easy stuff like cut the glass and the frame and the mat. I had to do all the hard stuff. Like put it all together. But to tell the truth it was a piece of cake. Just take a look at the finished product. Isn't it handsome? (And think of the money I saved by doing it myself.)

Nazi Hunter Disappointed In Canada

ANCOUVER (CP) — The man who tracked down Adolf Eichmann said Tuesday he lost confidence in the Canadian government after it failed to help bring suspected mass murderers to trial.

"There was a time that I had hoped that in Canada they would do the minimum," said Simon Wiesenthal, head of the Jewish Documentation Centre in Vienna.

"I informed the (Canadian) authorities about people here. The answer was nothing. Many times when I was invited to go to Canada I refused to go."

Wiesenthal, 69, said at a news conference here Tuesday that one former Nazi lives here and is known to city police. He refused to give details, saying the documentation centre once suffered greatly after falsely accusing a suspected Nazi.

The problem is not only with the federal government, but with Canadian Jews and others who are reluctant to resurrect the memories of the Nazi slaughter, he said.

Wiesenthal said he is in favor of the television program Holocaust. He said the period covered by the program is not well-documented in history books and should be brought to the attention of the post-war generation.

"We learn from the tragedy that what happened in the Nazi period could happen again in any country," he said. "We need such programs. . .because our society forgets so quickly."

There are still more than 100,000 war criminals in hiding, Wiesenthal said.

He said his hunt for former Nazi criminals is also a fight against time, because witnesses and criminals are dying of natural causes.

New Leads To Murder

Several new leads have developed from a mass publicity campaign aimed at helping RCMP solve a murder that occurred in northern B.C. 18 months ago.

Insp. E.B. Terkelson of the criminal investigation branch headquarters in Victoria said today he is pleased with the response to the campaign initiated last month.

Terkelson said another witness came forward after reading newspaper reports of the case.

Officers have received a number of other calls, including two from Victoria residents, and are chasing down the new leads.

Lindman's body was found in the bush near Topley on Oct. 16. He had been shot once in the head.

Police suspect the murderer was an American hitchhiker Lindman picked up somewhere in the United States. Lindman, a motel owner from Beaver, Utah, was on a vacation to Alaska via Prince Rupert at the time.

SURVIVOR A NO-SHOW IN COURT

VANCOUVER (CP) — Patrick Kouchnire, 24, who recently survived a 23-storey plunge from a Vancouver apartment, failed to appear in provincial court Tuesday on charges of theft over $200 and possession of stolen property.

Immigrant Marriage Racket Bared

OTTAWA (CP) — A Conservative released a government report Tuesday saying foreigners are getting immigrant status through marriages of convenience arranged often by criminals, naive youths and poor persons under threat of serious harm.

Jake Epp, his party's immigration critic, said the report, documenting 100 cases of marriages of convenience, was written by a Toronto immigration investigator.

He asked Immigration Minister Bud Cullen in the Commons to strengthen the department's investigative service because he said only five per cent of total suspected marriages of convenience are investigated. The remainder easily slipped through exisiting procedures.

Cullen said he thinks his officials are looking into the matter. If they were not he would tell them to.

The report said Canadian citizens, some former immigrants, marry foreigners and sponsor their entry into the country as a husband or wife. Sometimes the bride and groom have never met. A divorce is later sought or the marriage annulled.

The report said there are several small rings operating in the arranged-marriage field. Sometimes the foreigner is charged a price of plane fare to Canada plus $1,000 or more and in one case an elderly man "admitted he married and sponsored for only $70."

Persons who agreed to the arrangement sometimes were threatened "with harm or death if they withdraw their sponsorships."

"Several have pleaded directly to me (the investigator) for protection. Most go into hiding or disappear.

"Women, women with children, elderly veterans, old winos, etc. are being subjected to one of the most despicable forms of coercion."

It said one woman was told her children's ears would be cut off if she withdrew her sponsorship. An elderly man was beaten and two youths were threatened with a handgun.

"In very few cases are the sponsors what we would call normal or average," the investigator wrote.

"They appear to be from society's fringe in one respect or other: unemployables, chronic welfare recipients, financially destitute, emotionally disturbed, mentally retarded, gullable country bumpkins, convicted criminals or small-time hoodlums."

The report included names of persons involved in small rings arranging such marriages, including a real estate agent, a lawyer, a discotheque operator, and two convicted prostitutes. One 18-year-old had married and sponsored three foreigners in six months.

Nine of 27 sponsors randomly checked with police had criminal records.

The investigator said investigative resources are inadequate and regulations should be tightened.

"From our present means of dealing with sponsorships based on marriage, we are, as a result, allowing prostitutes, criminals and financially destitute, to select the immigrants for Canada's future."

There was no indication in the report of the suspected number of such marriages.

Figures showed an increase in the number of landings granted by sponsorship of a spouse from 15,553 in 1972 to 18,320 in 1973 to 21,479 in 1974 to 26,410 in 1975. There was a decrease in 1976 to 25,000 and incomplete 1977 figures showed 23,251.

The report said a similar problem exists in other affluent western nations.

It said both partners in such marriages usually share the same ethnic background.

In the majority of the marriages, the husbands and wives never lived together. The marriage was not consummated.

"Many of the sponsorships were made by Canadian-born women who appear to be hardened individuals with many of the mannerism of prostitutes," the investigator wrote.

Nine of 27 sponsors randomly checked with police had criminal records. Many were welfare mothers or old men with drinking problems.

In one class at Ryerson Polytechnical Institute four students agreed to marriages of convenience. Three of the students withdrew and made statements to immigration officials.

The investigator said investigative resources are inadequate and regulations should be tightened.

"From our present means of dealing with sponsorships based on marriage, we are, as a result, allowing prostitutes, criminals and financially destitute, to select the immigrants for Canada's future."

In the Commons Cullen said said he is concerned about marriages of convenience and agrees the problem "does have a backlash effect" on the bona fide immigrant community.

Chaplin Exhumed? 'Nonsense'

CORSIER-SUR-VEVEY, Switzerland (Reuter) — A report that anti-Jewish villagers exhumed the body of Charlie Chaplin was described as nonsense by the butler for Chaplin's widow, Oona.

He told an interviewer by telephone from the family's 18th century mansion in Corsier-Sur-Vevey: "There is absolutely no truth in this report. It is a load of nonsense. We know nothing new of the whereabouts of Mr. Chaplin's body."

The British-born comic star of the silent screen died at the mansion Christmas Day, aged 88. He was buried in the village graveyard two days later. On the night of March 1, his body disappeared.

A report in the Los Angeles Herald Examiner on Monday quoted "an impeccable source" as saying the body was dug up by local villagers because the comedian was a Jew buried in a non-Jewish cemetery.

The report said Oona, 51, was told within 24 hours where she might find the body but it did not say where the body was now.

Judge Jean-Daniel Tenthorey, investigating the case, told reporters Tuesday he is alarmed by the story and by many such speculative reports printed around the world since Chaplin's body disappeared.

"There is really nothing new. I am alarmed by all these reports," Tenthorey said. "We have been told that Charlie Chaplin's body was hidden in a hen-house not far away, that it was in Australia, that it was stolen by a religious sect, even that it was not stolen but just buried deeper. We have checked out all the reports and found nothing."

A leading member of the Jewish community here, Matthias Treidel, also cast doubt on the report. He told reporters Tuesday: "It would really astonish me, first of all, because we don't really consider Charlie Chaplin a Jew. I think his grandmother was a Jew, and he was brought up in a Jewish area of London, but that's all. Secondly, there is no marked anti-Semitism here and several Jews have been buried in the same village cemetery."

The English wife of a prominent villager here, who declined to be named, told an interviewer she had received an anonymous phone call four days after the theft of the body, telling her where to find it.

"A man speaking German, who said he had found my husband's name in the phone book, told me very politely that the body was buried at a certain spot, 300 yards from a particular landmark in the Swiss town of Fribourg.

"He did not say why the body had been stolen or why it was there. I immediately told the police and I assume they checked the spot. But they never told me whether they found anything or not."

The woman added: "There have been many rumors in the village that the body was found long ago, but not one official says anything so we just don't know. Maybe we never will."

BIG MISSILE DEAL MADE

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — The U.S. Navy on Tuesday awarded Lockheed Aircraft Corp. a $343-million contract for the first 92 of its new Trident submarine-launched nuclear missiles.

The 7,200-kilometre (4,500-mile) range Trident C-1 missile, to be made by Lockheed's missiles and space division, will be initially installed in Poseidon missile-carrying submarines.

'Major Proposal' on Troop Cuts

VIENNA (Reuter) — Members of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) tabled new proposals at the deadlocked East-West conference on troop reductions today and said the move represented a major initiative.

A NATO spokesman said the proposals, based on a West German plan, were "intended to move the negotiations decisively towards a first-phase agreement."

The 12 NATO delegations presented the package to Communist diplomats privately last week. The proposals were tabled only today, as the conference began a four-week spring recess.

Details were withheld, but conference sources said NATO has offered several key concessions, provided the Warsaw pact reduces its forces to match Western levels in Central Europe.

The 19-nation conference has been deadlocked for 4½ years over Western demands that the Warsaw pact should make the largest cuts to compensate for Communist manpower and tank superiority.

Dutch delegate Willem de Vos Van Steenwijk told a news conference the NATO proposals deal with two major issues:

—Commitments on size and timing of reductions by six NATO countries, Belgium, Britain, Canada, West Germany, the Netherlands and Luxembourg, in the second phase of a reduction accord;

—The composition of a Soviet army reduction in the first phase.

Conference sources said NATO has dropped demands for the withdrawal of a 69,000-man Russian tank army from East Germany in the first phase, and now would accept the withdrawal of an equivalent five Russians divisions from East Germany, Czechoslovakia or Poland.

It has already been agreed that only Soviet and U.S. troops stationed in Central Europe should be thinned out in the first phase.

The new offer on commitments means that five European NATO countries and Canada, all with troops in Central Europe, would commit themselves during first-phase negotiations to make specific cuts in the second phase, sources said.

The Dutch ambassador said the Western initiative is conditional on resolving discrepancies between NATO and Warsaw pact manpower figures.

Anti-Terrorist Squad Formed

COLOMBO (AP) — Sri Lanka police will set up a special anti-terrorist unit to deal with militant young Tamils who want a separate state in Sri Lanka, the government announced. "They already have murdered several policemen and made attempts on many others," a senior police spokesman said. "This can't go on forever." The Tamils, from south India, are the island country's major minority, making up about 22 per cent of the population. About 70 per cent of the population are Sinhalese.

NEUTRON TESTS ADMITTED

United Press International

Sources at the Nevada Nuclear test site say that at least one, and probably more, neutron bombs have been exploded in underground tests in the desert. Federal officials have not denied the report.

Barring an accidental "vent," such underground explosions produce no radiation in the atmosphere.

"The neutron bomb has been tested at the Nevada test site, and probably within the past year," a source familiar with the program said at the time. He said one test produced such a weak explosion scientists doubted the underground detonation would be felt even in the immediate area of the test site, 100 miles north of Las Vegas, and so did not issue the usual announcement of the test.

He said it produced a yield of three kilotons — a very weak blast by nuclear standards, about one-seventh the power of the atomic bombs dropped on Hiroshima and Nagasaki.

Dr. Donald Kerr, deputy manager of the Nevada Operations Office of the Energy Research and Development Administration — which inherited the test site and nuclear testing duties from the defunct Atomic Energy Commission — said then that "all (nuclear) devices in this nation's stockpile have been tested at the Nevada Test Site."

Noting that the furor over the neutron bomb arose when Congress was asked for money to manufacture them, he said "before any project is submitted for funding, they are researched, developed and tested."

Asked whether that specifically applied to the neutron bomb, he replied: "To the degree these devices are in the stockpile, yes, that's true."

Nile Yields Temple Ruins

LONDON (Reuter) — British and Egyptian navy divers have raised the ruins of the temple of Augustus Caesar from the Nile, the defence ministry said Tuesday.

The temple, believed to be the oldest Roman monument in Egypt, was on the island of Philae, which was submerged when the Aswan Dam was completed in 1970.

More than 300 stone blocks weighing up to one ton each have been raised to dry land, the ministry said.

Dolphin Slaughter Causes U.S. Outcry

TOKYO (Reuter) — The public outcry which followed the killing of more than 1,000 dolphins by club-wielding Japanese fishermen now threatens to become an incident between Japan and the United States.

The U.S. House of Representatives international affairs subcomittee has decided to hold public hearings on the dolphin slaughter beginning April 24.

And the fishermen of Iki — a small island off Japan's westernmost main island of Kyushu — who are at the centre of the issue are hurt and bewildered at charges of brutality and savagery.

The fishermen, who make their living taking cuttlefish and yellowtail in the Korea Strait between western Japan and South Korea, wonder why they are being criticized for trapping 1,000 dolphins in a bay a few weeks ago and killing them with knives and clubs.

The fishermen say they do not want to kill the dolphins but they have to because the mammals eat too much fish.

"The dolphins have threatened our trade for many years," says Takayoshi Ogawa, chairman of the liaison council for combatting dolphins on Iki island, where the killing took place.

The fishermen of Iki say 1,000 dolphins eat 110,000 pounds of fish a day. There are 35,000 dolphins off Iki and more than 300,000 in waters around Kyushu, they say.

The fishermen, who permitted television cameramen to film them up to their waists in bloody seawater as they stabbed and hacked at flopping dolphins, claim the dolphins they killed in a day would have eaten as much as a 10-day catch by the 4,500 Iki fishermen.

Over a two-month period the dolphins cost the fishermen $2.3 million in eaten fish, Iki islanders say.

Showing of the TV film outside Japan brought about a storm of protest. Angry letters and telegrams poured into Japanese embassies in about a dozen countries.

Other protesters, mainly animal lovers and ecologists, sent letters to Japanese authorities in Tokyo or directly to the Iki islanders.

The London corrrespondent of a major Japanese newspaper reported that more than 1,000 letters have been received by the Japanese embassy there, many describing the carnage as nauseating.

The method of killing appears to the writers to be offensive; many of the dolphins had their bellies slit open and were dropped into the sea tied to concrete blocks.

The controversy over the killing grew with the U.S. House decision to hold public hearings.

The Japanese fisheries agency said U.S. fishermen killed 385,000 dolphins a year between 1952 and 1972. In 1976 about 78,000 were killed by them, the agency maintained.

Agency officials say privately it is irrational for the United States to criticize Japan for killing dolphins when U.S. fishermen kill almost four times as many.

Japanese TV has demonstrated the problem faced by the Iki fishermen, showing boats in the Korea Straits surrounded by plunging dolphins.

Despite the killings, the fishermen in Iki have erected two plain wooden monuments on a beach on the island for the souls of the slaughtered mammals.

DEADLY DISPLAY

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP) — The U.S. Navy has taken a truckload of more than 1,000 live bombs, shells, grenades and bullets from the Charleston Museum to be disarmed or destroyed. Museum offical Kenneth Jones said the explosives range in size from pea-sized rifle percussion caps to a 13-inch mortar shell and in age from the Civil War to the Second World War.

Shipyard, Textile Demise Planned by Gov't: Tories

OTTAWA (CP) — Conservatives charged and a minister denied Tuesday that a working paper shows the government plans to allow the textile, furniture, footwear and shipbuilding industries to shrink at the cost of more than 240,000 jobs.

Opposition Leader Joe Clark and Flora MacDonald (Kingston and the Islands) said their accusations are based on a working paper on tariff negotiations now under way in Geneva.

Some of their concerns expressed in the Commons and outside were echoed in an interview by the chief economist of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association.

Miss MacDonald said the paper shows that the government plans to allow these industries to be reduced so that Canada can get some tariff advantages in other sectors of the economy.

"The weakest industries will be let go. They will die a long slow death."

Deputy Prime Minister Allan MacEachen said there are no grounds to the Conservative charges.

"The document has not been clearly identified and does not express the government's position. A lurid imagination would be required to regard it as such," he said.

Miss MacDonald gave reporters copies of the document, which she said was prepared by officials of the trade and industry department.

It said: "One consequence of the multilateral trade negotiations will be to expose Canadian producers to more vigorous competition in domestic markets.

"These presures may be particularly acute in certain industries such as textiles, clothing and footwear, electrical household and industrial equipment, paper products and some lines of machinery and equipment."

It said certain industries, especially those concentrated in Quebec, have such high production costs it seemed unlikely they would ever be competitive with foreign firms.

Canada should gradually reduce employment in these industries with the industries receiving temporary protection against foreign competitors.

"These are the most crucial trade negotiations Canada has ever entered," Miss MacDonald said in an interview.

"The pressure is on our negotiators and they're going in there with the attitude that certain industries are dispensable. The government seems to have forgotten that some communities are dependent on these industries for their survival."

The government should immediately tell all MPs what position Canada had taken at the negotiations, she said.

Clark accused the government of negotiating in secret.

"Is the long-range policy of the government to lose jobs for Canadians?" he demanded.

He supported, in an interview, by Larry Thibault, chief economist for the Canadian Manufacturers' Association.

Thibault said: "One of the things that concerns businessmen is how little information on the government's program and position in the negotiations they have. We have not seen any specific plans. We are not sure what the government has put on the table in Geneva."

Thibault said textile spokesmen told him any reduction of tariffs on imported textiles would mean the "rapid and total demise of the industry in Canada."

He said manufacturers had heard nothing about the specific charges made by the Conservatives in the Commons.

An aide to MacEachen said the government could not release specific proposals and positions because decisions were being made as the negotiations proceed.

He said the document was merely a background paper designed to give industry representatives and idea of the range of available options.

"The Conservatives' seem to think it is a Bible. It is just an overview and certainly not government policy."

The paper was released in February in conjunction with the federal-provincial first ministers' conference. It was designed to explore the future of Canadian manufacturing into the 1960s, he said.

But Miss MacDonald said: "It came from the department of industry, trade and commerce and it was endorsed by deputy minister in both the trade and industry branches."

The current tariff negotiations, known as the Tokyo Round, began in Geneva in January.

The talks are expected to end by December with the major target a basic package for all nations to approve at a July meeting in Bonn.

Levesque At Harvard

BOSTON (UPI) — Quebec Premier Rene Levesque flew to Boston today to address Harvard University students on "Independence and Quebec's Economic Future."

His lecture at Harvard's Sanders Theater was to be followed by a news conference. The events were being sponsored by the Canadian-U.S. Relations Seminar of Harvard's Center for International Affairs.

Levesque was also to meet with former Harvard economist John Kenneth Galbraith.

SPECIFICS DEMANDED

EDMONTON (CP) — An Alberta Supreme Court justice has ordered Premier Peter Lougheed to tell the CBC exactly how he feels he was libelled by the Tar Sands documentary drama last year.

Mr. Justice Tevie Miller issued the ruling Tuesday on the libel suit filed by Lougheed against the Crown corporation late last year.

Lougheed claimed the television show portrayed him as weak and irresolute, as ignoring the advice of civil servants and signing a "sweetheart deal" with oil companies involved in the $3-billion Syncrude project at Fort McMurray.

The CBC says it cannot prepare a proper defence on the basis of such general claims.

Mr. Justice Miller said Lougheed's lawyer, Rod McLennan, does not have to go into painstaking detail of every picture and sound making up an allegedly defamatory scene.

Lougheed is to supply the additional particulars within 14 days, after which the CBC is expected to file a statement of defence.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

Despite a number of defence witnesses who suggested lengthy parole with strict supervision, Judge Fred Green sentenced a 23-year-old man in Victoria provincial court Tuesday to 22 months in jail.

Green, before sentencing Marek Bohdan Czyzewski, said citizens are entitled to some sense of security and that he could not allow feelings as a human being to interfere with his duties as a judge.

Czyzewski entered guilty pleas Feb. 27 to one count of robbery with violence and two counts of attempted robbery with violence.

Crown counsel Richard Law went over the sequence of events Feb. 11 which led to Czyzewski's arrest by Victoria city police.

The string of holdups began at about 4:40 p.m. when Czyzewski entered The Jewelry Box, 910 Government, grabbed a woman by the throat and demanded money. He was unsuccessful and rushed out when a customer came into the store.

About nine minutes later, Czyzewski went to Studio 35 Photography, 634 Humboldt, and grabbed another woman from behind, demanding "all the money you have." Again, he was unsuccessful when the woman struggled free.

At about 6:30 p.m., he entered Freddy The Freeloader's, 1537 Fort, and grabbed a male clerk by the throat, reached in and took about $150 from the till. A struggle ensued and Czyzewski dropped about $24 before running out when a customer dashed out to phone police.

Czyzewski was arrested about a half hour later by police, who were waiting at his residence at 1023 Belmont.

Defence lawyer David Wilson asked the court to take into consideration no knife or weapon was used in any of the incidents and argued that if Czyzewski stayed on the same road, he would be a substantial nuisance and burden to society and possibly a danger. Wilson suggested that this was a crossroads in his client's life and asked if society might not be best served by giving him the help offered by the witnesses to have him in their home under mandatory and strict supervision for his drinking problem.

Law argues that the psychiatric report ordered by the judge advocated serious consideration for day parole at the least and said that if Czyzewski has matured in the last 38 days, which were spent in Wilkinson Road jail awaiting disposition of the charges, then he should not go to jail. But Law noted that Czyzewski's criminal record included a 1974 conviction for robbery, for which he received a two-year sentence, two convictions for breach of probation in 1975, and three convictions for armed robbery in 1976, for which he received another two years in jail.

Green, noting that his options were fairly wide, said his decision must reflect concern for the protection of society and noted that Czyzewski had an unfortunate history in the form of a serious criminal record. He said that Czyzewski obviously suffers from psychological as well as environmental problems which no one person could correct. No matter how willing the people around him are to help, Green stated, Czyzewski must help himself.

On the robbery charge, Green sentenced Czyzewski to 22 months in prison, placed him on one year's probation, ordered him to abstain from alcohol and drugs during the probation period, and recommended he be allowed to participate in any Outward Bound or gradual-release program.

Charlie Gordon Remington, 24, and Kathleen Maria Remington, 28, both of 2530 Mount Newton Cross Roads, were jointly charged with breaking into Island Furniture Mart Ltd., 2513 Beacon, and with possession of stolen property.

After the man entered a guilty plea to breaking and entering, Crown counsel Nicholas Lang told the court Sidney RCMP checked Remington's vehicle at a Sidney parking lot at about 12:35 a.m. and was told Remington's car needed water. Police returned about five minutes later and found a tape deck near a doorway and decided to investigate further.

In the vehicle was found a turntable, speakers, tapes, and two color television sets from the Sidney store valued at more than $2,000.

Lang advised the court that Remington's parole on a charge of trafficking in narcotics had been revoked. He was on mandatory parole supervision until Oct. 31 of this year.

Kathleen Maria Remington was remanded without plea until the same date and was released on her own recognizance in the sum of $500.

A 17-year-old who failed to attend school as directed in his probation order was sentenced to three days in jail.

Terry Lee Miller, 650 Davida, pleaded guilty to breach of probation and Lang told the court Miller was convicted Sept. 29, 1977, in Port Alberni of theft under $200. He was handed a suspended sentence, placed on nine months probation and ordered to attend school.

Lang said a vice-principal at Spectrum Community School reported that Miller withdrew from the school Feb. 7 after being absent for a month.

Green said he didn't particularly enjoy imposing jail terms but said the courts could not tolerate wilful breaches of probation orders.

Glen Allen Bond, 3229 Shelley, received concurrent terms of seven and five days in jail after pleading guilty to impaired driving and assaulting a peace officer.

Lang said Bond was pulled over at about 10:25 p.m. April 10 on suspicion of impaired driving. While climbing into a police vehicle to be taken to the Victoria city police station for a breath test, Lang continued, Bond tried to run away but was caught. In the struggle, Bond kicked a woman officer in the face, court was informed.

PHONE CALL COST $528

VANCOUVER (CP) — Belinda Edwards, 27, a school teacher from Australia, was ordered to pay $528 to British Columbia Telephone Co. after pleading guilty in provincial court Tuesday to theft of communication service and theft.

Court was told the charge was for a call the woman placed to Bombay, India, from a coin telephone here April 7. The call lasted two hours and 12 minutes.

A B.C. Tel spokesman said that an overseas operator in Montreal became suspicious of a credit card number she was given and notified B.C. Tel security.

Greenpeace Names Board of Trustees

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Greenpeace Foundation has named an international board of trustees who will be responsible for establishing Greenpeace policy on environmental issues and for allocating funds for international campaigns and expeditions.

The Greenpeace movement, which started in Vancouver in 1969, has offices throughout North America and in Britain, France, Australia and New Zealand. It has major offices in San Francisco, Honolulu, Seattle, Portland and Michigan, but its international headquarters will be here.

Named to the international board were Greenpeace founders Bob Hunter and Patrick Moore, whale scientist Paul Spong, accountant Bill Gannon and Bob Taunt.

"This is an historic time for Greenpeace," said Hunter, who will serve as chairman.

"From humble beginnings nearly 10 years ago, we have grown into a truly international movement.

"The formation of Greenpeace International marks a new era in our efforts toward a global awareness of ecology and the need for the preservation of endangered species."

Lise Rose Wins Tax Case

MONTREAL (CP) — Lise Rose, the sister of former terrorists Paul and Jacques Rose, won a court judgment Tuesday exempting her from paying income tax on $13,000 in damages awarded to her for wrongful dismissal from a government job.

Miss Rose, arrested during the October Crisis of 1970, was later sentenced to six months in jail for contempt of court. She had refused to testify at a coroner's inquest into the death of former Quebec labor minister Pierre Laporte.

Paul Rose is serving a double life sentence for the kidnapping and murder.

Miss Rose had worked for the Quebec revenue department, but was dismissed following her six-month jail sentence for "unauthorized absence" from her job.

Miss Rose later won a Labor Court ruling that she had been dismissed illegally, and the court ordered the revenue department to pay her $9,584 in damages and to pay Montreal $3,438 for welfare payments to Miss Rose after she was fired.

No Reimbursement of UIC Funds

OTTAWA (CP) — Opposition MPs Tuesday urged the government to reimburse provinces for increased welfare costs caused by individuals who are waiting for or have lost federal unemployment insurance benefits.

Employment Minister Bud Cullen replied in the Commons that the federal government will not directly reimburse the provinces for increased welfare costs with money saved by changes in the unemployment insurance program.

However, Cullen said compensation is being provided through job creation and training programs and work sharing programs financed with unemployment insurance savings.

Ed Broadbent, New Democratic Party leader, demanded a federal commitment to direct reimbursement of provincial governments for welfare. He made the demand in light of the government's projection of a $135 million saving from changes in the insurance program.

The major change in the program last fall requires insurance claimants to work between 10 and 14 weeks, depending on the regional unemployment rate, before being eligible for benefits. The former requirement was eight weeks.

Broadbent referred to a published report which said welfare figures in 10 major Ontario communities show the municipal taxpayer is footing the bill for increased unemployment costs. It said social service directors blame dried-up unemployment insurance benefits at the federal level.

The average municipal homeowner, through property tax, should not have to bear the burden of unemployment costs, Broadbent said.

PEACKEEPING ROLE 'RISKY'

OTTAWA (CP) — There is an "element of risk" for Canadian troops serving in the interim peacekeeping force in Lebanon but the government believes they are playing a vital role, Defence Minister Barney Danson said Tuesday.

He said that Canada is "trying to contribute to bringing stability" to the troubled Middle East.

He was replying in the Commons to Conservative defence critic Allan McKinnon (Victoria) who said Canada has committed extra troops to the United Nations force in Lebanon despite continuing turmoil in the region.

External Affairs Minister Don Jamieson announced last week that Canada has agreed to keep troops in the UN interim force until Oct. 1. The Canadian contingent would be increased to 80 from 35.

Canada had originally said it would supply troops for two to four weeks until Canadian communications experts could be replaced by troops from other countries. The UN force was set up after Israel invaded Lebanon to wipe out Palestinian guerrilla bases in mid-March.

McKinnon said several of the normal conditions for Canadian participation in peacekeeping forces had not been fulfilled in southern Lebanon.

The force had been set up without a requirement for a peace settlement in the region, he said.

Danson said "there isn't perfection" in the UN peacekeeping mandate but there were efforts to bring peace to the region.

PM More of a Fool On Strike Issue: Parrot

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau "is even more of a fool than he appears to be" if he thinks public servants will stand idly by while Parliament rolls back their strike and bargaining rights, says Jean-Claude Parrot, president of the Canadian Union of Postal Workers (CUPW).

Parrot and activist members of other public service unions got together to map out a strategy to resist moves to control strike and bargaining rights, obtained by federal public servants in 1967.

With a federal election campaign looming, the 2.3-million-member Canadian Labor Congress (CLC) has pledged to campaign against all politicians who support measures to keep public sector wage increases behind those in the private sector.

The government's introduction of the bill April 10, just as conciliation hearings started in the lengthy contract between CUPW and the post office, was a purely political move designed to cast postal workers as scapegoats to divert public attention away from the government's mismanagement of the economy, Parrot said.

"The employer's position of changing the rules in the middle of the game will determine our course of action," Parrot said.

"We will see what happens when the time comes."

However, he counselled public servants attending the meeting of the Ottawa Committee for Labor Action, to be prepared "to turn your rhetoric into action . . . directed not only at the political level, but at the workplace, at the operational level."

If demonstrations and press releases fail to stop introduction of government measures to cut existing public service rights, "we must be prepared to ultimately disregard these laws in order to defend our rights."

Gil Levine, research director for the Canadian Union of Public Employees (CUPE), said public servants at all levels of government are moving out of mandatory wage controls "into more controls."

A bill now before Parliament would tie wages of federal public servants to wage increases in the private sector through a comparability formula. Similar proposals have been made by provincial governments.

Union representatives said Monday even if the federal bill is not passed before Parliament is dissolved for a federal election campaign, it likely will be reintroduced after the election unless the unions muster enough support to kill the proposal.

Ottawa Cautious On Housing Program

OTTAWA (CP) - The federal government is involved in hurried last-minute negotiations with the provinces over new federal housing programs to avoid charges of lack of consultation that could be damaging in an expected election.

Still smarting from a backlash from Quebec and the four western provinces over the sales tax proposals announced in last week's budget, federal officials say the government is determined that the housing proposals not be turned from a plus to minus in the election ledger.

"I'm over-prudent in this because I don't want to be told after the fact that this is not what the provinces want," Urban Affairs Minister Andre Ouellet said Tuesday after appearing before a Commons committee where he dropped hints about the changes.

He said the programs have been in the works for more than six months and were not planned to coincide with the election. But officials say Ouellet, described by a government aide as "one of the most political members of cabinet," recognizes the importance of making the announcement before an election.

He said the changes would go at least part way toward meeting provincial demands for less federal involvement in municipal affairs through grants tied to specific programs.

Under a new municipal services grant program, the provinces would get more control over municipal grants for water and sewage treatment facilities as well as for medium-density housing.

The changes would include almost double the $90 million spent last year improving substandard housing under the residential rehabilitation assistance program and grants to reduce interest on loans to non-profit housing groups.

The rehabilitation program would be expanded to cover all residential buildings in the country. Grants now are confined to those in 478 areas designated for assistance since the program was created in 1973, Ouellet said.

But he said priority would still be given to applications from the designated areas, from people on low incomes and for grants for older homes.

Ouellet said agreements would be signed with each of the provinces allowing them to allocate money within certain categories.

But, although the federal government would be taking a step back from its involvement in overseeing use of the money, he said, "We don't want the money going into general revenues."

He said Quebec was among those provinces with which agreement still had not been reached.

LIBERALS SURVIVE VOTE

OTTAWA (CP) — The Liberal Commons majority easily defeated a Conservative motion of non-confidence in the government's economic program Tuesday night by a vote of 116 to 76.

The Conservatives and the New Democrats and four Social Crediters voted together against the government's budget introduced last week.

Leonard Jones, former Conservative who now is independent MP for Moncton, N.B., voted with the government.

It was the second test of the budget introduced by Finance Minister Jean Chretien. Last week an NDP motion was beaten.

Liberals gave Prime Minister Trudeau 60-second ovation when he rose to vote. They cheered even louder when he mockingly pretended to leave to dissolve Parliament to permit an election.

A couple of Conservatives signalled they were all in favor of him calling the election immediately.

The Conservative motion said the government has lost control of the economy. The temporary cut in sales tax proposed in the budget would not help the economy as much as a cut in the income tax amounting to $2 billion.

Perrault Jabs Balky Senate

OTTAWA (CP) — Urging fellow senators to move quickly "because their is no mystery about the imminence of dissolution," Senate Leader Ray Perrault asked Tuesday that a raft of government legislation be made law by Thursday night.

But the Senate was not about to be rushed.

"Some of us think we should give some time and reflection to some of these bills," protested Senator Jacques Flynn, Progressive Conservative Senate leader.

"We don't understand this rush. It has not been explained to us," said Senator Allister Grosart (PC—Ontario).

"This hint that dissolution (of Parliament) may be coming sometime soon is not good enough. It does not allow the Senate to do its duty."

Flynn said he might be persuaded to move faster if he knew exactly when an election call would come.

"Come on be frank with us," he urged Perrault. "When do they (government) want dissolution?

"We can give the bills third reading tonight if there is going to be dissolution tomorrow."

Perrault said no decision has been made on the date of dissolution but that "I rather think it will come sooner rather than later."

Four bills, all rushed through the Commons this week, need Senate approval. All got approval in principle in the two-hour sitting.

Anyone Seen 40M Eggs?

KITCHENER, Ont. (CP) — The Ontario director of the Canadian egg marketing agency says the disappearance of more than 40 million Canadian eggs, which were supposed to pass through the United States en route to overseas buyers, is typical of the frustrations he has experienced with the agency.

Stan Steen said the secrecy and confusion surrounding the egg disappearance, which Canadian and U.S. officials are investigating, is typical. He said agency directors are often not told about any problems until they begin to investigate and ask questions.

Although officials can trace the eggs only as far as a point of entry in the U.S.

Officials in both countries say there is a possibility the eggs are being sold in U.S. retail outlets and that some person is making an illegal profit from them.

The eggs are only supposed to pass through the U.S. and officals there demand that bonds be posted to make sure they do not stay in the country.

Although the officials have the bonds for the eggs, they said that no one has come forward with the necessary documents to prove that the eggs have moved out of the U.S.

Test Criticism Dismissed

OTTAWA (CP) — Defence Minister Barney Danson dismissed Soviet criticism of the so-called neutron bomb Tuesday but again refused to state Canada's position on the weapon.

He said at a Commons defence committee meeting that it would be "self-righteous" for Canada to take a stand on whether the weapon should be used in NATO. The weapon would not be used by Canadian forces as Canada was a non-nuclear country. But NATO allies were divided on the issue.

Women Troops Up to Public: Danson

OTTAWA (CP) — Defence Minister Barney Danson says he wants the public to say if women should fill combat roles in the armed forces.

He said Tuesday it will help the government decide if women should get the risky combat jobs.

The cabinet will make up its mind only after defence department reports have been submitted on admitting women to military colleges and to fighting roles in the forces, he said. Those reports should be ready by June.

"I won't make the decision alone," said the minister who has been under fire recently on the women's rights issue.

"I would want to get the feeling of the Canadian people generally."

There has been growing pressure on the defence department to remove barriers to women in the forces, the latest a proposal by an advisory group to Danson on military colleges. It has urged the minister to allow women to attend military colleges.

The minister told the Commons defence committee he has asked the department to report in the next two months on how this can be accomplished.

But a decision on military colleges also depends on another study on women in combat, he said.

Before the cabinet decides these issues, Danson said he wants to know what the public feels. He said he believes "people haven't made up their minds yet."

Defence department officials have said they think Canadian society isn't ready for women in combat roles. And Danson has suggested men would be uncomfortable if women served along side them in fighting jobs.

The department says 5.7 per cent of Canadian troops are women, more than in any other country. However, more than 30 of 100 trade categories in the forces are closed to women.

One of these categories is piloting aircraft.

FREE RIDES IN EDMONTON

EDMONTON (CP) — The city's northeast light rail transit line opened Tuesday with free rides and long lineups.

People waited patiently for a chance to crowd into passenger cars in which most had to stand for the 30-minute round trip from the downtown area to the city's Belvedere district.

At some surface stations, such as those near the Edmonton Coliseum and the Commonwealth Stadium, potential passengers watched as fully-loaded cars eased in and out.

Problems with the system, which runs above ground along a Canadian National Railways right-of-way for all but a few blocks, were minor.

Passengers patiently accepted delays as harried Edmonton Transit officials fiddled with controls and called in other cars on the line's radio system.

Security guards will periodically ride the trains to guard against vandalism and possible rowdyism. Some guards were in the cars Tuesday.

Work on the line's five stations is still in progress.

Free rides on the line will continue through Thursday. The system will be closed Friday. An opening ceremony will be held at the line's central station Saturday, with free rides again Sunday. The first day of regular, paid service will be Monday, April 4. The fare will be 40 cents.

Skipper Convicted

ST. JOHN's, Nfld. (CP) — Capt. Manuel Perez Fernandez of the Spanish trawler Vieirasa Seis was fined $3,500 and was ordered to forfeit the $8,900-value of 16 tons of cod when he was convicted in provincial court Tuesday of breaking Canadian fishing regulations.

The captain was charged with using illegal-size mesh in trawl nets April 13 after his vessel and gear were inspected by fisheries officials.

At the time of the inspection, the trawler and her sister ship, Vieirasa Cinco were fishing 140 nautical miles northeast of Cape Bonavista, well within Canada's 200-mile fishing zone.

Fisheries officers said about 48 tons of the 75 tons of cod aboard was caught within the zone.

Bankers Warned Of Trade Curbs

VANCOUVER (CP) — Sweden issued a warning Tuesday to 2,000 delegates at the annual conference of the Inter-American Development Bank about a "threatening tide of protectionism" among industrialized countries.

John Nordenfalk, Sweden's under-secretary of commerce, warned that protectionism "could be extremely damaging to all of us."

"It would indeed be a tragic development if the industrialized countries were now to close their borders to the goods of the developing nations at the very moment when some of them are, in effect, on the threshold of success in their industrialization process."

The threat of protectionism and the issue of political consideration when approving loans dominated the speeches of many of the 14 countries that were heard during second-day sessions of the conference which ends today.

Since its inception in 1959, the bank has loaned $12 billion to support more than 1,000 Latin American projects with a value of more than $46 billion. At this conference, the bank is making a strong bid to replenish its funds by imposing a fee increase on its 41-member countries that could bring it an additional $8 billion. Honduras has suggested the fee increase should not be less than seven per cent "if the bank is to continue as the principal source of financing for Latin America."

In his speech, Nordenfalk said great importance must be attached to multilateral negotiations on trade currently under way in Geneva.

"These negotiations must serve to reinforce the system of free trade and give the developing countries an increased access to the markets of the industrialized countries."

N-Fuel Supply Limited

WINNIPEG (CP) — An official of Atomic Energy of Canada Ltd. (AECL) says Canada's proven natural deposits of nuclear fuels are sufficient to meet needs only for 40 years unless breeder reactors are developed.

Bob Hart, vice-president of AECL, said breeder reactors—which produce more fuel than they consume—likely should be developed at the laboratory level so the technology will be available as natural uranium supplies decrease.

Hart, speaking Tuesday to an energy conference sponsored by the Canadian Information Processing Society, said he believes more uranium will be found as the prices for other energy sources such as oil and gas, continue to rise.

With the use of breeder reactors, he said, uranium deposits already proven in Canada could last 8,250 years.

Breeder reactors and the recycling of nuclear fuel are controversial subjects among some environmentalists who believe they increase the risks associated with nuclear development.

Striking Contrast In Education Talks

PENTICTON (CP) — There were two education seminars at the local convention centre Tuesday, but the problems they tackled had little in common.

Okanagan high school students, most of them white, filled one side of the building, filing past a variety of exhibits at a career seminar designed to help them sort out their futures.

Many of them stopped to discuss the options offered by the Armed Forces, various government branches and companies like Okanagan Helicopter and Woodwards. Most of them stopped to talk to representatives of six universities who promoted the benefits of post-secondary education.

The future was not so rosy across the hall. About 60 delegates to the 10th annual meeting of the Union of British Columbia Indian Chiefs, which opened officially today, crammed into a conference room to discuss changes in an education system that provides post-secondary education to nine out of every 100 B.C. Indians compared to 28 of every 100 whites.

The changes a UBCIC committee would like made would start with the Master Tuition Agreement, a deal between the federal Department of Indian Affairs and the provincial government which covers education of B.C.'s Indians.

"The main thing," said UBCIC vice-president Philip Paul, "is there is no involvement of Indian people in discussions surrounding the agreement."

Paul, who worked in an alternative education program for Indians at Victoria's Camosun College, said the province's education system caters to the white, middle-class Protestant.

Indians get little from the system, and that, said Paul, is the primary reason for many of the native population's problems — illiteracy, drinking and high rates of suicide and unemployment.

"The country is up tight about an unemployment rate of about 10 per cent," said Paul, a member of the Tsartlip band in the Victoria suburb of Saanich.

"Well, in most Indian communities it's between 50 and 70 per cent. Indian people have never left the last depression."

Paul sees the ultimate goal as the total control of Indian education at the local level under the authority of band councils.

"We're not looking at a massive pullout of the provincial education system," he said.

Woman Stabbed

VANCOUVER (CP) — Ann McBryan, a 60-year-old hotel telephone operator, became Vancouver's ninth murder victim of 1978 when she was found stabbed to death Monday night in the alley behind her West End rooming house.

Police said she died as the result of multiple stab wounds to her abdomen and back. Although an undisclosed amount of money and jewelery was found at the scene, robbery has not been ruled out as a motive.

Police said a would-be robber might have fled the scene when neighbors were aroused.

TAXES RISE IN VANCOUVER

VANCOUVER (CP) — The average city homeowner will pay increased taxes this year despite a 3.3-per-cent tax cut for general purposes.

The cut in general purposes tax, approved by city council Tuesday, means the average homeowner will pay $443 in general purpose taxes, down $15 from 1977. However, when school, regional hospitals and Greater Vancouver Regional District taxes are added, there will be a total increase of about two per cent over 1977.

Business and industrial property owners will face projected average tax increases of 20 per cent.

Burnaby Hits Industry Sites

BURNABY (CP) — Tax increases in Burnaby's $88.5 million proposed 1978 budget hit commercial and industrial properties hardest, with 865 of the 971 industrial sites facing a tax increase of between 50 and 100 per cent.

The proposal, presented to council in a manager's report, shows that taxes would more than double for 400 residential properties and an additional 400 would have increases between 45 and 100 per cent.

The mill rate increases to 46.8 per cent this year from 19.14 per cent last year but the report says that because the total assessed value of all properties also jumped to $3.2 billion from $1.2 billion, the mill would be worth less.

A final decision on the budget will be made May 15.

Mushroom Mine Planned

BRALORNE (CP) — An abandoned gold mine about 480 kilometres north of Vancouver may be the scene of a year-long pilot project in mushroom production.

Five persons are awaiting final approval from the mine's owners, Bralorne Resources Ltd., before they start hauling manure into the main shaft.

The gold mine was closed in 1971 because it was no longer profitable.

Fred Urquhart, a director of the Bralorne Community Association, said the idea of mining mushrooms originated with a Pennsylvania business, which has been producing mushrooms in an abandoned mine for 37 years. The Pennsylvania company has nearly 1,000 employees and produces 40 million pounds of mushrooms annually, Urquhart said.

VICTIMS GET PAID IN SEWER BACKUP

SURREY (CP) — Surrey council has voted to pay damages totalling almost $10,000 to two homeowners who were the victims of a sewer system backup.

Municipal Manager Dan Closkey said one resident had almost a metre of sewage in his house after a sewer line plugged near the Woodbridge Condominium development.

The blockage was cleared and "about 10,000 gallons sewage" shot through the system and up into the house.

One resident incurred $8,600 in damages and the other had $1,300.

B.C. 'Not Happy' With Ottawa Cash

Economic Development Minister Don Phillips said Tuesday he is not happy about the federal government's financial participation in the Duke Point development at Nanaimo.

Transport Canada has decided to proceed with development of a new deep sea terminal at the point, Hugh Anderson, Liberal MP for Comox-Alberni, said earlier.

Anderson said Transport Minister Otto Lang has indicated he will ask the treasury board for a $6.5 million grant to finance the project and a $4 million loan to the harbor commission to aid the development.

He said the project will include a berth for deep sea vessels and an assembly area, and will have room for future expansion.

Phillips said that while he is pleased the federal government is involved with the project, he is not enthusiastic about its small financial commitment.

The minister said he will study the offer and then bargain with the federal government for more money.

He said the federal offer permits construction of only one deep-see berth, while the province wants a minimum of two.

The development could produce about 2,500 jobs, Phillips said.

GRITS 'RUINED' B.C. GAME PLAN

The federal government ruined the re-election game plan of B.C.'s Social Credit government by forcing it to reduce the sales tax ahead of schedule, former attorney-general Alex Macdonald said Tuesday.

"The game plan was to make the people suffer through excessive increases in taxes and rates, blame it on the New Democratic Party, punish the people of this province until shortly before the next election and then give them back a little bit of their money," Macdonald, (NDP — Vancouver East) told the legislature.

Macdonald made the remarks during debate on a motion of non-confidence in the budget which includes reduction of the sales tax to five per cent from seven per cent. The federal government said it would finance the reduction for the first nine months at an estimated cost of $120 million.

House Aid Approved

The provincial and federal governments announced Tuesday approval of the $760,000 second phase of a joint program to renovate a Vancouver housing development.

The development, Orchard Park, is a 20-year-old rental housing community of 169 family and senior citizens units managed by the B.C. Housing Management Commission.

The first phase included extensive redesign and improvement to the kitchen and bathroom areas of the row housing units at a cost of $550,000, a news release said.

POTATO FARM AID STUDIED

The provincial government is working to ensure that potato growers affected by the closure of Spetifore Foods Ltd. of Delta will get aid in covering their production costs, Agriculture Minister Jim Hewitt said Tuesday.

George Spetifore, president of Spetifore Foods, said Monday he has decided to close his French-fried potato plant — a move that will eliminate a major market for B.C. potato producers and result in the loss of 125 jobs.

He blamed federal subsidies to McCain Foods Ltd. of New Brunswick for his losses which he said totalled $5 million during the past 18 months on his $8 million capital investment.

Barbara Wallace (NDP—Cowichan-Malahat) asked Hewitt if he had made a decision to pay the farmers between $37 and $47 a ton for potatos for which they would have received $85 a ton from Spetifore.

Multi-Union Bargaining Set Up in Construction

VANCOUVER (CP) — Documents officially establishing a multi-union bargaining council for the British Columbia construction industry have been signed by representatives of the majority of construction unions in the province.

Jim Kinnaird, spokesman for the B.C. and Yukon Building Trades Council, said officials of 15 unions signed the documents, which were prepared after several weeks of consultations with the B.C. Labor Relations Board.

Kinnaird said two other unions are also expected to sign the agreement.

He said the new single bargaining unit was formulated to avoid a situation where one striking union could cripple a vast segment of the construction industry.

Talks for a 1978 collective agreement are expected to begin next month.

The 17 international unions represent about 60,000 workers. Their agreements are the first major contracts up for renewal in B.C. following the removal of federal wage controls.

The unions are holding their wages and policy conference Thursday and Friday to prepare contract demands.

Kinnaird said he assumes negotiations with Construction Labor Relations Association will begin sometime within the next two weeks, adding that the effectiveness of the new joint council will be put to the test during the talks.

"I think it's going to be a tough set of bargaining," Kinnaird said. "All across Canada, construction unions have been experiencing difficulties with their employers.

"The real test of the joint council lies in its capability of concluding collective agreements with CLRA."

He said the constitution governing the joint council is "the best we could get for the moment."

"There are many years of bargaining history among the trades to eliminate," he said. "It will be hard to develop discipline. Some elements have been pushed, shoved and steered into this.

"Some still believe they can go back to the old ways if this doesn't work. Old ideas die hard."

Under the terms of the joint council constitution, all strike and contract ratification votes must be approved by the membership of at least two-thirds of the unions, and an over-all majority of all construction workers.

Initial decisions on whether to hold a strike vote or whether to recommend acceptance or rejection of proposed contract terms must have the support of at least two-thirds of the building trades.

The constitution permits individual trade bargaining, but prohibits any union at one of these sessions to concede "a key demand (common to all unions)."

The final format followed 10 days of intensive mediation among the unions by the labor board and Len Guy, B.C. Federation of Labor secretary-treasurer.

Board chairman Paul Weiler, who called for formation of the joint council, said Monday he is "gratified that the leaders of all of the building trades have now accepted the constitution.

"This is the first time in the North American history of construction unions that they have voluntarily belonged to a joint collective bargaining structure.

"I'm glad it was voluntary," Weiler said. "That's the way it should happen.

Tourist Booth Location Opposed

Construction of a tourist booth or office in Goldstream provincial park would mean more traffic hazards, more litter and a general downgrading of the park, Jacques Wendover, president of the 800-member Thetis Park Nature Sanctuary Association, said Tuesday.

He urged the government to place the tourist booth elsewhere, preferably further north where it would be of greater use to tourists on their way to Victoria.

The tourist booth proposal has been submitted to Recreation Minister Sam Bawlf and Provincial Secretary Grace McCarthy by Charles Danbrook, owner of Westwind International Motor Inn at Langford.

Park lovers are strongly opposed because they say it would mean widening the highway and cutting down trees to provide access to the building.

Danbrook said if his proposal means cutting trees, he is against it.

He said his plan called for the construction of a booth without damaging the esthetics of the area.

It would mean construction of an access lane, he said, which could be done by widening the highway which he thought would not entail tree-cutting.

"But if it's going to mean cutting down trees, I'm all for dropping the proposal," he said.

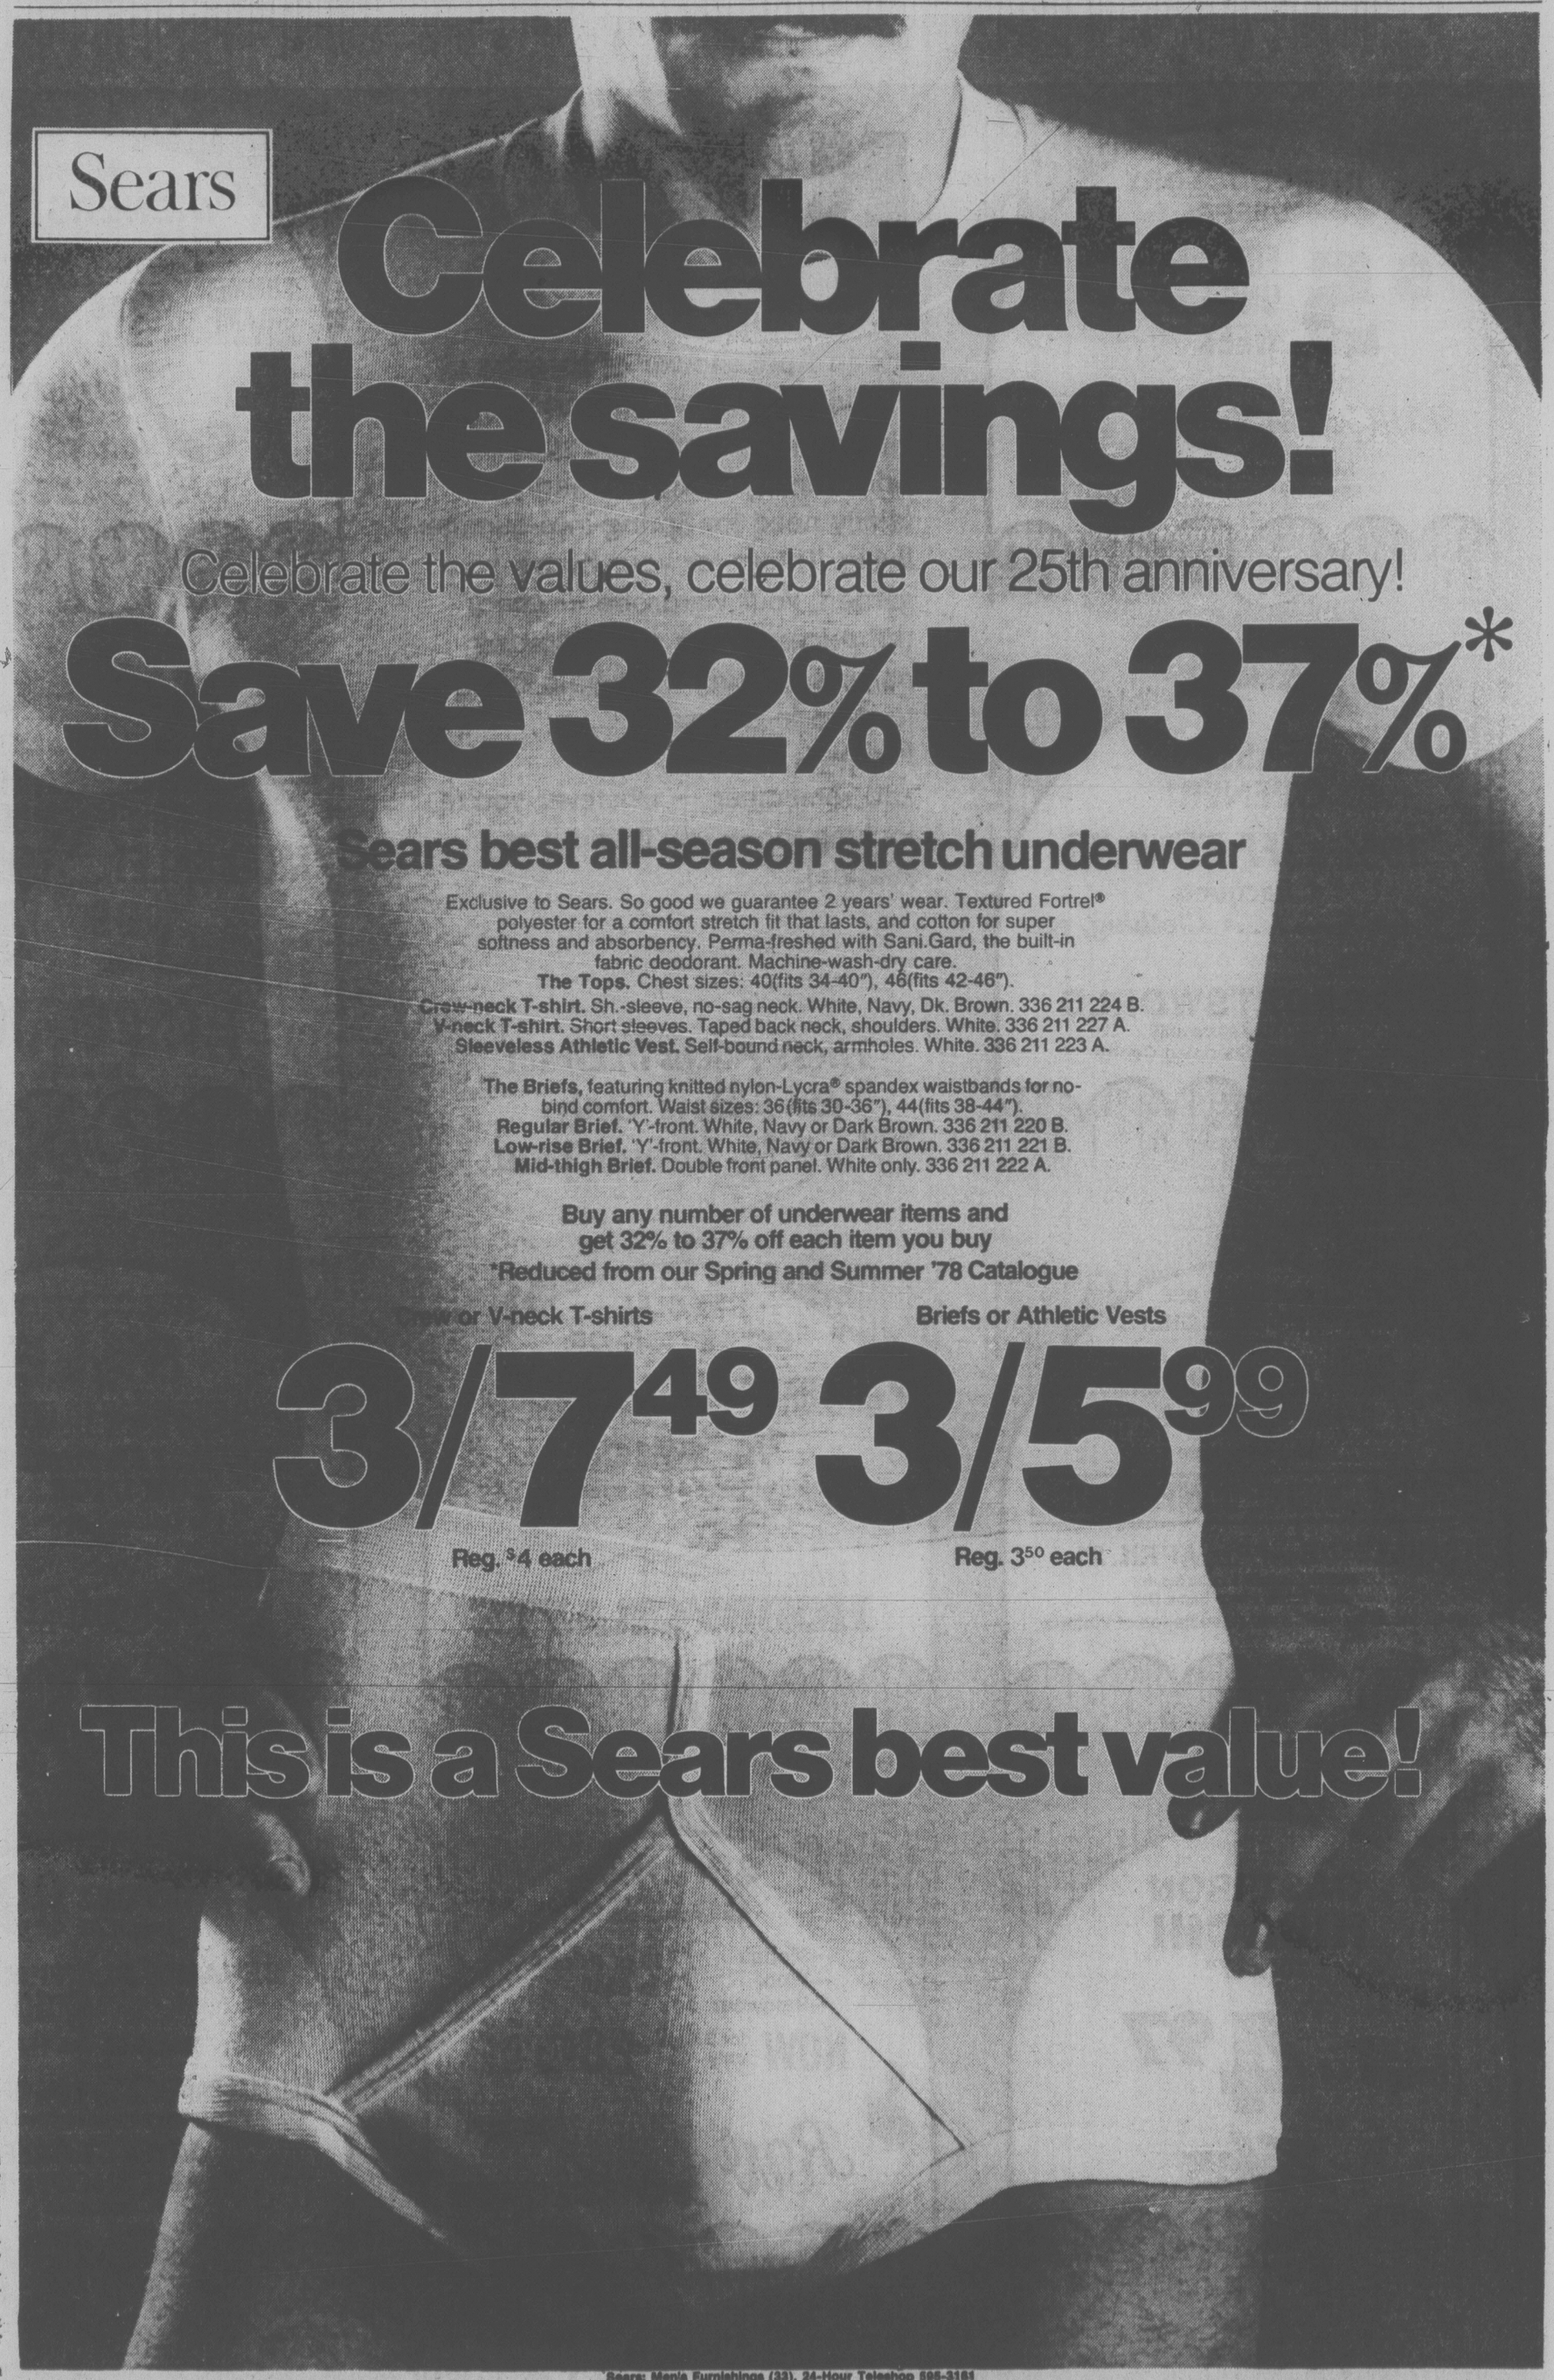

He said he would appreciate if anyone knows of any other location outside the park where a tourist booth can be erected.

Such a tourist information centre would benefit the western sector of the Capital Regional District, he said.

But Wendover said a tourist booth at the proposed location was too close to the city to be of much use to the regional's district western sector.

"It should be located at some suitable location higher up on the Malahat," he said.

He said Goldstream is a small park and to start carving it up for commercial purposes would spoil one of the most attractive areas on southern Vancouver Island.

THE JOYS OF TEPEE LIVING

She Stripped in a Blizzard

New York Times

TRAVERSE CITY, Mich. — When the most severe blizzard in the state's history struck northern Michigan recently, it struck June Soper's home especially hard.

"It was monstrous," she said in an interview the other day. "I never heard such noises."

She is particularly vulnerable to the weather because she lives in a tepee, a fact that has not escaped the notice of residents of this city nor, for that matter, of Detroit, 250 miles away.

Mrs. Soper, who is part Cherokee, said that some people think her choice of a home is crazy while others think it is simply eccentric. She has a phone in the tepee and when the weather is bad Detroit disk jockeys call to see how Mrs. Soper is surviving.

She knows that she's a local personality and seems to enjoy her status. During the blizzard, despite feeling terrified, she said, "I took off all my clothes and danced around the fire — because I figured somebody would ask me what I did during the storm."

Speaking more seriously of tepee life, she said that she chose to live in a tent in August 1976 because it seemed to her that she had virtually no other option. She said that prejudice against Indians was so great in the area that she couldn't find decent work or housing. In previous years she'd built 10 tepees to be used in ceremonial powwows. So she decided the most ecomonical thing to do would be to build one to live in.

"Now that I'm here, I'm having so much fun that I'm staying," she said. "I have enough money to move into an apartment or a house but I don't want to."

Mrs. Soper, who is evasive about her age and will say only that she was born in the 30s, has worked as a nurse and as an auto mechanic. For the past seven years she has been a volunteer liaison officer between the state district court and Indian communities in the area (a major chore is helping Indians raise bail). As a result of her liaison work, she recently began receiving a salary from a government grant that requires her to write a pamphlet informing laymen about court procedures.

She's also a good source on the difficulties and enjoyment of tepee living. There are no chairs in her tepee — visitors sit cross-legged on the floor, which is comprised of three layers: a plastic sheet, an inch of pine needles and a brown carpet.

There is a low, narrow bed that folds out to a full-size one. Mrs. Soper laughed when she recalled that it took her two months to learn how to get out of bed without falling down.

"Did you ever realize that when you get out of bed your eyes automatically line up with the walls?" she asked. "Well, the tepee walls slant, as you can see. I had to learn to keep my eyes closed while I got up."

Mrs. Soper heats her tent with a fire built in a small sand hearth in the centre of the floor, which is 16 feet in diameter. The living area is enclosed by an inner tepee made of 36-inch wide nylon sailcloth, which she stitched together on a sewing machine. The outer shell is waterproof canvas. Straw surrounds the outside of the tepee, providing insulation, and pine boughs form a windbreak.

The piece of land the tent stands on is rented from a nearby amusement park and costs Mrs. Soper $32 a month, which includes electricity — she does have some contemporary amenities such as a television set and an electric heater, which supplements the fire.

The hard part about her life, Mrs. Soper said, is the loneliness. She is divorced but has a son who works for the district attorney in Cheyenne, Wyo., and a grandchild. She misses having family members around her.

Agricultural Loans Okayed

ROME (AP) — The International Fund for Agricultural Development has approved loans of $12 million each for Sri Lanka and Tanzania.

The loans are the $1-billion organization's first since it was established four months ago to help developing countries fight hunger and malnutrition.

The Sudanese president of the fund, Abdel Muhsin al-Sudeary said he hopes to lend about $150 million during 1978 and perhaps $300 million to $350 million during 1979.

Weather, Coal Strike Harmed U.S. Economy

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Commerce Department says severe winter weather and the coal strike may have sliced 2 per cent off the nation's economic growth rate — an indication unemployment may be just around the corner.

The Gross National Product for the first quarter of 1978 is due Wednesday. GNP is defined as the value of the nation's goods and services after inflation and is considered the most important national economic yardstick.

An advance hint of the GNP figures is in the Commerce Department's monthly "Survey of Current Business," released Monday.

It estimated that personal consumption expenditures adjusted for inflation, a statistic that amounts for nearly 65 per cent of GNP, actually declined the first three months of 1978.

By comparison, personal consumption expenditures rose 9.5 per cent at an annual rate during the fourth quarter of 1977. Fourth quarter GNP grew 3.8 per cent.

The U.S. GNP has not dropped since since the 9.6 per cent slide in the first quarter of 1975 as the recession ended. Economists say GNP must grow at a rate of between 3.5 per cent and 4 percent growth to keep unemployment from rising.

The bad news was couched in the article's dry language.

"On the basis of information available in mid-March," the department said, it appears that the coal strike and the severe weather may have reduced the change in first-quarter real GNP by as much as 2 percentage points from what it would otherwise have been."

The coal strike affected GNP "mainly by reducing its inventory component."

Bad weather "reduced the construction and personal consumption expenditures components." The article hedged, saying, "it is likely that the latter reduction was offset by higher inventory accumulation."

"Depressing" is not a word an economist uses lightly, but there it was: "Even aside from these depressing effects, production, sales and incomes were weak in the first quarter," the survey said.

The department explained the slowdown as "loss of momentum" in the consumer sector.

'Operation Keelhaul' Grim Battle for Bodies

WASHINGTON (UPI) — On July 26, 1947, U.S. Army Lt. Col. C.F. Fothergill, replied to a protest from a Russian colonel.

"For your information all Soviet citizens who express their desire for repatriation to the Soviet Union are dispatched to Rome within two hours of making their request . . .".

Thirty-year-old documents, declassified by the National Archives Monday, showed American and British forces in Europe after the Second World War sometimes did more than dispatch Soviet citizens to Rome, sometimes repatriating Russians who preferred death to being sent home.

The previously secret documents deal with "Operation Keelhaul," the Allied effort in Italy to return Russians to their homeland.

Historians believe about 2 million Russians who had been prisoners of the Germans were sent back, many against their will, many to be put to death or into prison camps.

Some had been prisoners of war, some slave laborers, some never had accepted the communist revolution and had put on German uniforms and taken up arms against Soviet troops.

The papers tell of one instance when 300 unarmed Russians fought with their fists against British and American troops escorting them to the Russian-occupied sector of Austria.

Although their escorts carried machine-guns and automatic weapons, the Russians killed or wounded between 30 and 40, the files said. About 100 Russians were killed in trying to escape or took their own lives rather than go home.

At Yalta in 1945, Franklin Roosevelt and Winston Churchill gave in to Joseph Stalin's demand for their return. The Allied war leaders apparently feared the Russians would refuse to release American and British prisoners of Germany recaptured by the Soviets in their sweep from the East.

"Keelhaul" was often a battle for bodies. Russian Col. Pavel Zakovlev peppered Allied officials for the return of more and more Russians. It was one of these demands that Col. Fothergill addressed in his letter.

The Americans were sometimes callous.

"About 75 individuals, recently held in U.S. custody, have been found to be subject to forcible repatriation," one U.S. Army officer wrote. "Rosters of these persons will accompany shipment."

R.R. Stokes, a member of Parliament, described what what he had been told by Italian truck drivers about the shipment of Russians on May 8, 1947.

"Altogether about 300 men were to be surrendered in both camps. Out of them only about 200 were transported to the Soviet zone of Austria. The rest are dead," he said.

"Some have committed suicide, and some were killed by the escort while resisting forcible deportation."

Stokes said a Russian father jumped from a truck and felled several British troops to make a break in the line so his son could escape. The son was killed, the father thrown back into the truck, unconscious.

A mother who was not to be repatriated pleaded to be sent with her son.

"She was torn from her son by brute force," Stokes said.

Hijacks Doubled Last Year

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Lax security at foreign airports was to blame for a doubling of airline hijackings in 1977, the Federal Aviation Administration reports.

An FAA report said poor passenger screening allowed air pirates to carry weapons aboard 21 planes last year and to successfully hijack 13 of the aircraft.

It said would-be hijackers without weapons tried to take over seven additional flights in 1977 and managed successful hijackings in three of those attempts.

Last year's global total of 30 successful and unsuccessful hijackings was twice the number recorded in 1976, the FAA said Monday in its seventh semi-annual report to Congress on aviation security.

FAA chief Langhorne Bond said only five hijacking attempts — all unsuccessful — took place in the United States. None of the attempts involved a weapon that was taken through the normal passenger screening system.

But worldwide, Bond said, weak screening programs allowed air pirates to carry weapons on board planes in 21 of the 30 hijacking. He said 16 of those attempts were successful.

"The continuing acts of aircraft hijacking and sabotage, coupled with the strong cooperation and alliances between terrorist organizations, indicate that the threat of criminal acts against civil aviation is significant throughout the world," Bond said.

. . . WATCH THE BIRDIE

The red-billed ground cuckoos are the only pair in the world to mate, produce eggs and hatch a family in captivity. Zookeepers will be focusing a camera on them 24 hours a day for the next three weeks.

Ann Mayhew, publicist for the zoo, said in an interview that cuckoos at other zoos have either laid eggs and could not hatch them or hatched them and could not rear their young.

Cuckoos require a great deal of privacy, she said, adding that the camera was mounted to make sure all goes well and to study the habits of the birds without bothering them too much.

Koo and Kim hatched two eggs about a year ago and another one last fall, but started chasing and attacking their latest offspring and then had to be separated, Mrs. Mayhew said.

Money Woes Blamed on Housing Corp.

FORT McMURRAY, Alta. (CP) — Faced with massive budget deficits during the 1978 fiscal year, some members of the town board of this booming community on the edge of the Athabasca oil sands are willing to blame the Alberta Housing Corporation (AHC) for much of their difficulty.

At a special budget meeting recently when the board announced a $2.1-million deficit is possible despite provincial instructions to keep the budget balanced, discussions centred on difficulties in collecting taxes or grants in lieu of taxes from the corporation for land it controls in the municipality.

Finance director Bruce Otterdahl initially estimated in 1977 that the corporation should pay $764,000 through taxes or in lieu of taxes. After the budget was prepared, estimates of the corporation's obligation extended to $1.4 million, of which a total of $366,000 was paid.

Otterdahl said the discrepancy of more than $1 million between the amount owed and the amount received contributed greatly to Fort McMurray's financial difficulties.

"There's no magic wand that can be waved by anybody to make this budget balance without cutting service," said board member Bill Gendreau. "One major reason is that AHC isn't paying what it bloody well owes this town."

Board member Chuck Knight said the town's loss of revenue because of the corporation's unique tax status as a provincial corporation has been substantial.

He said MacKenzie Industrial Park and some private neighborhoods in Thickwood Heights should have been built by private developers, because about $1.3 million would have come in taxes from the industrial park and additional money from Thickwood Heights, where Fort McMurray cannot receive tax money until the corporation sells or leases the land.

As a government corporation, AHC cannot be victimized by land speculators and receives no return on its investment.

In the preliminary budget, the town has estimated revenue from AHC on the same basis as last year, anticipating the existing dispute will be settled in the town's favor. If not, the town could face a shortfall of about $400,000.

Officials of the town about 500 kilometres northeast of Edmonton have been told not to give the government an unbalanced budget but some board members suggested at the meeting an unbalanced budget could force the government to look more closely at problems.

"What if we submit an unbalanced budget and say we have no problem so long as AHC accepts its responsibility and pays a grant in lieu of taxes?" said Knight.

"The way out is to submit a deficit budget and make them (the government) realize they're responsible."

The meeting was told Premier Peter Lougheed should be told the community is getting "only lip service" from Municipal Affairs Minister Dick Johnston and Housing and Public Works Minister Bill Yurko.

One board member, Grant Howell, said the concern over AHC's situation is justified but it is too easy to blame the corporation entirely for the town's problem.

Auto Jack Danger Noted

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration says thousands of hydraulic automobile jacks should be recalled because they could fail, causing serious injuries.

So far, according to NHTSA Administrator Joan Claybrook, there have been six reported injuries, all minor. She issued a consumer advisory today urging owners to stop using the jacks, "especially if work under the vehicle is required."

The agency said three companies already have recalled more than 100,000 of the floor roller jacks and 11 other firms are being urged to do the same thing. The recalls to date involve the the Model 646 hydraulic floor roller jack from Hollywood Accessories, Compton, Calif; Models J-204 and W-1629 jacks from G. I. Joes Inc., Portland, Ore.; and Medallion Model 62-219 from Midland International Corp., Kansas City, Mo.

NHTSA began an investigation of the jacks last July following consumer complaints that a levelling mechanism could fail. The type of jack involved is an "all-steel, wide body chassis, with steel front and rear casters and a single arm leveling mechanism on the right side," NHTSA said. "The jack is rated at 1-½ tons."

OTTAWA (CP) — The remaining three of four stamps honoring the Canadian International Philatelic Exhibition — CAPEX '78 — will be issued June 10, the post office has announced.

A news release said the first stamp, a 14-cent stamp-on-stamp reproduction of a one-penny Queen Victoria stamp from the mid-19th century, was released in January.

The new 14-cent stamp reproduces a pair of 10-cent blue Jacques Cartier stamps from 1854; a 30-cent stamp shows a pair of half-penny rose Queen Victoria stamps from 1857 and a new $1.25 stamp for registered mail depicts a pair of six-penny slate-violet Prince Albert stamps from 1851, the news release said.

It also said the post office's first souvenir sheet reproducing the three stamps will be issued on one sheet bearing the CAPEX '78 and Universal Postal Union symbols.

A total 33 million 14-cent stamps, 23 million 30-cent stamps and 19 million $1.25 stamps, all designed by Carl Brett of Toronto, will be printed by the British American Bank Note Company.

Remaining Stamps Due Out June 10

It said the following companies are selling jacks which are the same or substantially similar to the ones already recalled:

Allison Corp., Model 9829; K-P Manufacturing Co., Model 2-2150; Chieftain Automotive Products, Model GL-08; Midland International Corp., Medallion Model 62-218; On-Guard Corp. of America, Model FS J387; Wilmar Corp., Model 1629; Universal Tool and Stamping Co. Inc., Model 6300; Foxcraft-Philmont Division, Gulf and Western Manufacturing Co., Foxcraft Model HFJ-30; Stem Distributing Co., Model A3000; Automotive Trading Ltd., Model GE-3000; and Watervliet Tool Co., Model H-1.

"Later models of these manufacturers are not involved in this investigaiton," NHTSA said in a consumer advisory issued Monday.

Ms. Claybrook said she was urging those companies to conduct a voluntary recall "before any more are purchased by consumers, especially in light of the large number of sales anticipated for Father's Day."

NHTSA said it also is investigating models of jacks marketed by Vornado, Zayre Corp., Schuman Auto Supply, Fred Meyer Co., and others.

Non-Political Dissidents Seek to Leave Hungary

BUCHAREST (Reuter) — A new-style dissident is frequently at embassy doors in Bucharest. He is the non-political "passport dissident" who wants to emigrate to the West.

Foreign diplomats say several hundred Romanians are contacting embassies under the watchful eye of police, hoping Communist authorities will let them leave.

For ordinary Romanians, unless they are ethnic Germans, Jews, or have close family ties abroad, it is hard to leave the country, in many cases impossible.

Exit restrictions, more severe since 1975, have spawned small groups anxious to draw attention to themselves in the hope that the government will give them passports to leave.

The passport-seekers also are making contact with visiting Western reporters, despite security men who sometimes question the passport-seekers as they enter or leave embassies and hotels.

The passport-seekers consist mainly of young people, aged between 20 and 28, many of them ordinary workers. In almost all cases, they are eager to have names and case histories publicized.

Potential emigrants might have their cases discussed in broadcasts if they send details to Munich.

Several groups received passports shortly after having their names broadcast by the radio, encouraging others to seek similar publicity.

The would-be emigrants generally have no basic quarrel with communism, and say they only want a better life.

They are scattered around the suburbs of Bucharest and consist of people brought together by circumstances. There are similar people in provincial cities, but less is heard about them.

"We offer them coffee, cigarettes and a listening ear, but we tell them frankly we can't help," says a Western consular officer.

Romanian police have been lenient with some passport-seekers, offering quick tourist visas in exchange for the withdrawal of emigration applications. The police know emigrants do not intend to come back even if they carry tourist visas.

In other cases, diplomats have been told, youths have been rounded up after visiting embassies, beaten by police, harassed, and sent on forced labor assignments. Some have been arrested on vagrancy charges after being sacked from their jobs.

Mihail Dumitrescu, a 26-year-old worker who wants to live in the United States, says he welcomes publicity. "At the beginning I was scared," he says, "but not any more."

One of the largest groups gave a Western reporter a list of 15 families seeking passports for the United States, Australia and West Germany, and said altogether 47 persons are involved.

New Labor Council

KAMLOOPS (CP) — A new Kamloops district labor council has been formed after 111 delegates attended a meeting chaired by Joe Morris, retiring president of the Canadian Labor Congress.

The council split in January into two opposing groups after its executive refused to permit three major unions from re-affiliating with the council without penalty.

Jack Kerstens of the International Woodworkers of America (IWA) was named council president.

COSTS HIT CHARITY

VANCOUVER (CP) — The United Way of Greater Vancouver has been faltering over the past 10 years with fund-raising failing to keep pace with inflation, the organization's president told the annual meeting.

Donald J. MacDougall said the organization had a ban on new member agencies until recently because it could not raise enough money to support them.

The base of community support must be broadened, he said, and he urged the directors and volunteers to tell people of the large number of agencies funded through the UW.

The 1978 campaign goal is $6 million, a 16-per-cent increase over the $5.2 million sought ($5 million was raised) last year.

Campaign chairman R. J. Kavanagh said that while donations rose by 4½ per cent last year, the inflation rate was more than 10 per cent.

MacDougall said a report has shown that contributions must rise by 11 per cent annually to keep pace with inflation and population growth. He said if the UW fails to raise enough money there will be a wasteful proliferation of fund-raising campaigns by agencies as they break away from the UW.

From 125 to 140 agencies receive UW assistance. They offer services to, among others, the handicapped, the blind, the mentally retarded, orphans, prisoners and the aged.

'Too Much Parental Feeling'

NEW YORK (AP) — Anthropoligist Margaret Mead says child abusers are parents with too much, rather than too little, parental feeling.

Speaking at a National Conference on Child Abuse and Neglect, Mrs. Mead added that the problem of child abuse is basically a problem of society itself.

"The child abuser is a parent with too much maternal or paternal feeling, not too little," she said, adding that they are over-achievers in terms of trying to be good parents.

"If you want to abuse a child," she continued, "you get rid of it, you abandon it on top of some garbage can or park bench. A child abuser does not want to torture her family, contrary to popular belief."

For hundreds of thousands of years, she said, "we've been giving people these ideals on how to be the ideal parent." But, she went on, becoming the prfect parent is not something learned from reading a book or holding a doll.

Sun, Wind, Water Gain Energy Status

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Slowly but surely, the Energy Department is beginning to acknowledge that the sun, wind, water and other renewable resources may play a major role in the energy future of the United States.

Latest evidence the department is recognizing the benefits of other power sources comes in a new report saying that California by the year 2025 might be able to turn almost completely from big central power stations fired by oil, gas, coal and the atom to dispersed, renewable energy sources.

The report was prepared under an Energy Department contract by a research team headed by Dr. Paul Craig of the University of California at Davis.

It said California technically could make the switch to renewable energy in 50 years despite a doubling of the state's population and tripled economic activity. But it also said stringent conservation would have to become a way of life to make the change possible.

Federal energy planners long have been criticized for neglecting or downplaying renewable resources in favor of the high-cost centralized power stations which now provide most of the nation's electrical power.

James Liverman, acting assistant energy secretary for environment, who released the report, said within the past three months the Energy Department has placed an increasing emphasis on relatively small-scale alternate energy sources. He said more evidence of the change will appear in the future.

The Craig report assumed U.S. petroleum supplies will be all but gone by 2025.

It said California might get 33 percent of its total energy from solar power, 7 percent from geothermal wells, 3 percent from hydroelectric dams, 16 percent from windmills, 10 percent from conversion of wastes, 13 percent from crops grown as fuels and 4 percent by trapping heat that is now lost.

The state still would require liquid fuel for 14 percent of its energy needs — the equivalent of 300,000 barrels of oil per day — to keep cars, buses and trucks running, the report said. That fuel might be created synthetically from coal or oil shale reserves outside the state, the report said.

Craig told a news conference the study — detailed in two thick volumes — focused only on the technical possibility of turning almost totally to renewable energy sources in California.

"We did not examine the economic, social or political difficulties of getting from here — 1978 — to there — 2025 — or the need to use coal or nuclear power during the transition," Craig said.

Craig's report was an updated, expanded version of a preliminary document issued several months ago. One major addition to the new version, he said, is a detailed explanation of the calculations to make it easier for researchers to conduct the same type of study in other regions of the United States.

BILINGUAL ADS PUSHED

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government should publish bilingual advertisements in English-language daily newspapers when there are no French-language ones in the community, Liberal MP Jean-Robert Gauthier said Monday.

"It would foster national unity and give a feeling of federal presence," said Gauthier, MP for Ottawa-Vanier and an ardent advocate of Franco-Ontarian language rights.

In Toronto, for example, there are 90,000 French-Canadians but no French-language daily serves the area, Gauthier told a Commons committee studying the expenditures of the office of Max Yalden, official languages commissioner.

In his annual report, tabled in the Commons and the Senate last month, Yalden said the federal government was ignoring French-speaking communities outside Quebec by not publishing more ads and declarations in the French-language press.

"As a result, Francophone communities are very often not informed in their own language of programs and projects planned by federal institutions or of federal services available across Canada or even in their particular region," the report said.

Because there are only two French-language dailies outside Quebec—one in Ottawa and one in Moncton, N.B.—Yalden recommended the government turn to weekly publications.

Trouble Hits Ont. Corn Crop

GUELPH, Ont. (CP) — For 10 or 15 years, cultivation of corn has flourished in southern Ontario. Hybrid varieties with relatively short maturing periods have led to an increase in production, which has been maintained with the help of the weed killer atrazine.

The first inkling of trouble came three years ago when a Bruce County farmer consulted crop scientists at the University of Guelph about an infestation of lamb's quarter in his atrazine-sprayed corn field.

The weed killer had worked effectively for more than 10 years and both the farmer and John Bandeen, of the department of crop science, found it difficult to believe what was happening. But tests of the lamb's quarter seed confirmed the farmer's fears.

About this time, Vince Machado completed a PhD in horticultural science at Guelph, working on the difference of tomato varieties in genetic susceptibility to nutrition which, like atrazine, is a member of the triazine family of herbicides. He continued at Guelph, working on the problem of atrazine tolerance with broad-leaf weeds in corn.

There was, by then, plenty to go on. Farmers in four more counties reported infestations of lamb's quarter in their corn and there were later reports of broad-leaf weeds such as redroot, pigweed, ragweed, bird's-rape and groundsel resisting the herbicide in Ontario, Quebec and the United States.

Triazines work by blocking photosynthesis in susceptible weeds but in the resistant plants the blocking process did not work.

Machado said the resistant strains of lamb's quarter and the other weeds probably had always existed in low proportions but only had a chance to multiply when atrazine knocked out the other strains.

He said other herbicide-tolerant weeds are likely to develop in situations where the same crop is grown over a number of years, particularly if only one herbicide is used. He now is working out the inheritance patterns of broad-leaf tolerance in broad-leaf weeds.

In the U.S. corn belt, where monoculture has been practised much longer than in Ontario, atrazine weed tolerance is not yet a problem. Bandeen explained that growers there are not totally dependent on chemical control but make wide use of scufflers to control weeds.

He said most Ontario farmers outside the traditional corn-growing area do not own this type of cultivating equipment but that it may have to play an increasing role in weed control.

Future weed control may rely on rotating herbicides and crops and involve cultivation as well. But for now, Bandeen recommended that farmers use the herbicide dicamba to control broad-leaf weeds in corn.

Traditional farming practices aggravate the problem, he said, citing the case of farmers who use farmyard manure supplied by animals eating forage made from weed-infested corn. The manure contained seeds that spread the resistant weeds from one corn field to an entire farm.

Minutemen to Defeat Tank Forces?

WASHINGTON (CP) — A Canadian Forces captain has proposed a revolutionary new method for coping with any Soviet tank attack on West Germany.

The proposal, made by Capt. F. R. Thomas in an article in Infantry, the journal of the U.S. Army Infantry School, calls for a return to the tactics used by the minutemen who harried British troops during the American Revolution.

Thomas, who now is serving as a United Nations observer in Syria, says the solution to the huge Soviet superiority in tanks may lie in the sophisticated individual anti-tank weapons that have been designed by NATO countries.

"Two hand-held, man-portable weapon systems are already in service — MILAN and Dragon — that give our soldiers the capability to engage tanks out to a distance of 1,000 metres with both a high hit probability and a high chance of a first-round kill."

The unique aspect of Thomas's argument, however, is that small teams of men armed with such weapons should be dispersed throughout West Germany's border area, ready to conduct independent guerrilla-type actions that will be costly, confusing and time-consuming for Soviet invaders.

"Every West German village and farm complex within 100 kilometres of the frontier should receive a complement of two, three or more MILAN-Dragon missile teams," he writes.

"Individuals in these teams should move into local housing and become part of the village scene for a period ranging from one to three years. . . .

"The individuals' dependents would become involved as well by being given uniforms and assigned such jobs as ammunition carriers, radio operators or drivers in the event of hostilities."

With such a system in place, he says, Soviet tank forces could lose one or two tanks every time they passed near a village, giving Soviet forces the thorny problem of whether to accept such continuing losses or throw offensives far behind schedule by dismounting armored infantry to laboriously clear each group of buildings.

In addition to acquiring high skill in local terrain, such resident teams would also help relations with the German people and "should convince the German people of their countries' resolve to fight."

Thomas further argues that such an "attrition belt" of modern-day minutemen would be made much more practical by the nature of the western soldier.

"The make-up of the individual soldier is one of the advantages that the NATO countries hold over the Warsaw Pact nations.

"The social and educational levels of the NATO countries produce a soldier whose individual initiative and ability to act on his own should be greatly superior to that of the conscript soldier of NATO's potential enemies.

"In addition, soldiers from the North American partners have a 'hunter-wild west heritage" that has prevented anti-gun lobbies in both Canada and the United States from having gun ownership prohibited.

"The individual NATO soldier can be given responsible taskings with sophisticated weapon systems.

"Accordingly, there could be a parallel between Lexington and the first hostile armored thrust of World War III."

TWO-WHEEL TRAVEL

VANCOUVER (CP) — With 97,000 kilometres already logged by motorcycle across Asia, Europe and North America, David McGonigal has been spending the winter planning a challenging two-wheel run from northern Alaska to the tip of South America.

With Trevor Ockenden, now in London, he has bumped across the backroads of Afghanistan, more or less following Marco Polo's route; has stuffed cardboard in his burned-out clutch to limp 800 kilometres into Tehran, Iran; come down with hepatitis in Nepal, where for three months he was "too weak to hold my bike up," and slept in the desert with a group of nomads.

McGonigal said if he had it to do over again he'd try to do even more back-road riding because "that's what touring is all about."

He said there now is a steady trickle of people motorcycling around the world.

It's a form of touring with the barest essentials—a glass-fibre pannier on each side of the bike and a back pack. The basic wardrobe is jeans, leather jacket, gloves and a full-face helmet even in the blistering heat.

McGonigal advises novices to plan well ahead because there's a lot of paper-work involved in crossing many borders and several countries require a carnet de passage document obtained by depositing 210 per cent of the market value of the vehicle in cash with the Automobile Association.

He must be prepared to spend the best part of a day at some border crossings because "a lot of the time they seemed to have no idea how to process our bikes."

He said the big touring bikes popular in North America are unsuitable for many parts of Asia and a traveller should have something in the 350 to 500 cc range.

You can't avoid all the bad weather, but spots to watch are northern India around the monsoon season in June and eastern Turkey in winter.

Game Preserve Provides Home for Rare Species

By WILLIAM FARRELL
New York Times

HAI BAR, Israel — It took seven years of hard work and plenty of battling in the often-infuriating thickets of Israeli bureaucracy to create this Negev community of 300.

Watching the residents — Somali wild asses, scimitar-horned Sahara oryxes, ostriches, addaxes, gazelles and ibexes — disport themselves in their 8,000-acre wildlife preserve has made it all worthwhile for Mike van Grevenbroek.

Van Grevenbroek, a salty tongued Dutch zoologist, is committed to populating the desert tract 25 miles north of the Israeli port city of Eilat with endangered species, most of which wandered in the region during biblical times and some of which are mentioned in the Bible.

The preserve, a shoestring operation receiving no governmental funds, depends on donations that emanate from the Holy Land Conservation Fund, 150 East 58th Street in New York — a place where the resident species are harried rather than endangered.

Since the Israeli preserve opened to the public in 1977 visitors have slowly been arriving to drive about the habitat of creatures such as the Somali wild ass, a handsome animal with a grey, mauve-tinted muzzle.

Already succeeding as a haven for endangered creatures, the preserve boasts one of the world's largest groups of ibex, a clumsy-looking mountain goat when on flat country but an esthetic delight when it bounds and leaps among its preferred rocky promontories. Huge boulders from an abandoned copper mine at nearby Mikhrot Timna have been installed, in exchange for which the preserve provides manure for workers growing mushrooms in caves.

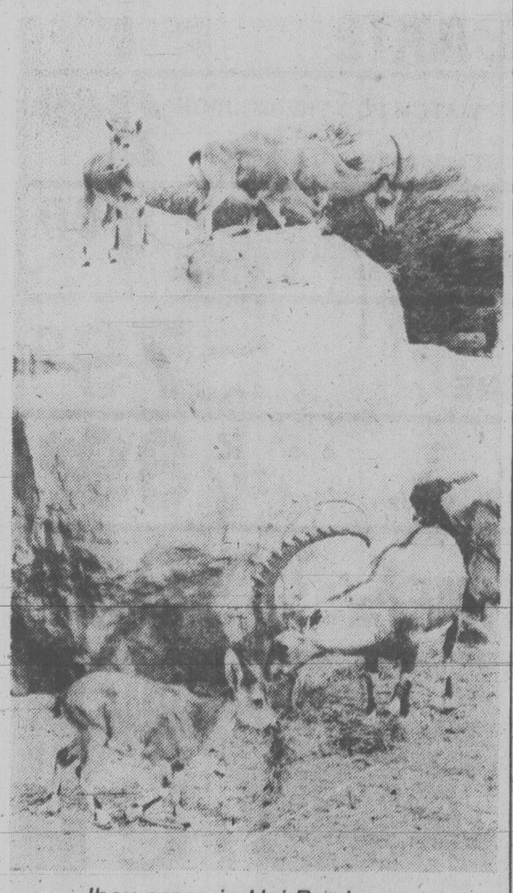

When the male ostriches are in heat — a condition easily discernible because their legs and necks turn a flaming red and they bound about agitatedly — they approach car windows and peck wildly. By way of contrast, the graceful Negev gazelles amble nimbly over the terrain.

Since only 3,000 acres are fenced so far, van Grevenbroek is harried by predators other than bill collectors. Some of his animals have been attacked by wolves. One predator, a hyena, has a pen of its own where it paces energetically and utters its blood-curdling laugh.

Particularly valuable are the oryxes. A species of gazelle with long, curved horns, the oryx is already extinct in Egypt, Tunisia, Algeria and Morocco. In ancient Egypt, where it was hunted and bred for religious sacrifices, it appeared often on rock drawings and tombstones. Though not a part of biblical Israel, it is thriving now in its carefully supervised enclosure.

Also thriving is a group of addaxes, which are smaller than the oryx and have long, coiled horns. They used to roam the Sahara and were nearly extinct, but the indications are that they are making a comeback under the vigilant care of van Grevenbroek and his young volunteer workers, who roam the preserve in a jeep piled high with food for their constituents.

Honda motorcycle owners

The Problem:
The Honda Motor Company Limited has determined that a defect which relates to safety may exist in the fuel filler cap release mechanism of certain Honda motorcycles. It may be possible during a collision for the rider to impact the hinged fuel filler cap in such a manner as to actuate the release lever resulting in the opening of the cap. If the cap opens gasoline will escape creating a fire hazard.

The Solution:
Canadian Honda Motor Limited strongly urges the owners of the Honda motorcycles listed below to contact their nearest Honda Motorcyle dealer for an appointment to have this defect remedied. He will replace the release mechanism with a key-type locking device. This service will be performed completely free of charge.

Too many workers are being taken for a ride.

It's happening far too often. Somebody forgets. Somebody doesn't pay attention. Somebody knows his job so well he could "do it blindfolded".

We see the results.

Job-related injuries and deaths continue to occur at a depressing rate.

And there's one person who can do a lot to change that.

You.

If you see a job hazard, remove it or report it. If you should wear protective equipment, wear it. If you're not sure how to do something safely, ask. It's your life.

Your health.

It's up to you to protect yourself.

SHEIK SUED FOR $2M FOR HITTING WAITER

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A $2-million damage suit has been filed against a Saudi Arabian sheik who allegedly slapped a waiter because a basket of fruit was not served fast enough to his hotel suite.

The suit seeking $1 million in general and $1 million in punitive damages was filed on behalf of Mario Rivas, 34, a waiter at the Century Plaza hotel.

Historic Artifacts Burned as Junk

OTTAWA (CP) — Historically-valuable furniture mistaken as old junk has been burned on the city dump, says Heritage Canada director Robert Phillips.

Phillips said his staff recently rescued a table that belonged to Prime Minister W.L. Mackenzie King and several pieces of 19th century furniture.

Further loss of heritage furniture could be prevented if government departments took steps to document and assess the historical value of their old furnishings, he said.

More than 99 per cent of the original furniture in the Parliament Buildings has been discarded in favor of modern furniture, Phillips said.

Some of the furniture turns up in government warehouses but any government official or MP can use it to furnish his offices, he said.

The prime minister, the leader of the Opposition, the Governor-General and the Speaker of the Commons select furniture from the warehouse for their residences, a government official said.

Old furniture not repaired or slated for the dump is handed over to the Crown Assets Disposal Corporation, the federal agency reponsible for selling all government property. Anyone may submit a bid for the furniture.

Former Woman Is Now a Father

ST. URBAN, Austria — A former women's world ski champion who underwent a sex change operation says he has fathered a baby girl.

Erik Schinegger, who as Erika Schinegger was banned from the 1968 Winter Olympics after failing to pass a sex test, said his wife came home Monday but the baby, Claire, will remain in a hospital for a few more days.

"We hope to have the baby with us in the next few days," the 29-year old Schinegger said. "It is a great feeling to have a family. I feel tremendous joy."

LAS PALMAS, Canary Islands — A 40-year-old Polish woman, reported missing last month, has radioed she is safe and well and continuing her bid to become the first woman to sail single-handed around the world, her husband said Tuesday.

Krystyna Chojnowska-Liskiewicz, a marine engineer, began her voyage from Las Palmas over two years ago. She was reported missing last month on the last lap of her voyage from Cape Town.

EMERYVILLE, Calif. — The Emery high school teacher who underwent a sex-change operation and became Steve Dain has lost his latest legal battle to get his teaching job back.

Judge Alan A. Lindsay, of the Alameda County Superior Court, denied Tuesday Dain's petition requesting a return to his teaching job and pay retroactive to his suspension in October, 1976.

SEATTLE — He may be No. 1 in Seattle, but Mayor Charles Royer found he didn't have much pull in Montreal when he was bumped off an American Airlines flight while trying to return home.

Royer and about five other city officials were returning from meetings with a Montreal developer Sunday when they learned the plane was full although they had reserved seats.

City Attorney Doug Jewett, who had boarded the plane earlier and got a seat, said he complained to the stewardess as the doors closed, "The mayor of Seattle is out there."

"I don't care if the president is out there, this plane is full," Jewett said she replied.

LOS ANGELES — Television executive Jack Haley Jr. filed a petition for dissolution of his marriage to singer-actress Liza Minnelli in Santa Monica Superior Court Tuesday.

NEW YORK — Soviet war hero Pyotr Grigorenko, stripped of his citizenship while in America to undergo surgery, said Tuesday he was now "a man without a country" and tearfully appealed to President Carter for refuge in the United States.

Grigorenko, 70, a Red Army general who was twice wounded in the Second World War, was later reduced to private for his human rights activities.

MENLO PARK, Calif. — Three boys held by an escaped convict for nine hours escaped Tuesday while the fugitive tried to shave and spruce himself up for a television interview.

Allen Lee Bouyer, 31, who had demanded an opportunity to proclaim his innocence on national television, was jailed on charges ranging from kidnap to assault with a deadly weapon.

MONTREAL — Veteran Liberal Bryce Mackasey says he is considering the possibility of stepping down from his seat in the Quebec national assembly and leaving active politics.

The former federal cabinet minister, who switched to Quebec politics in the November, 1976, election, said he hopes to reach a final decision by the end of the week. He will first consult with the provincial Liberal's newly-elected leader, Claude Ryan, and Prime Minister Trudeau, he added.

LOS ANGELES — John McVie, British-born member of the top-selling Fleetwood Mac rock group, was married here during the weekend to his longtime companion Julie Rubens, an agent for the group announced Tuesdat.

McVie, 32, was previously married to Christine McVie, a current member of the group.

Bail-Jumping Ex-Beauty Queen Traced through Canada to U.S.

TORONTO (CP) — The hunt switched today to the United States from Canada for Joyce McKinney, a former U.S. beauty queen who jumped bail on kidnapping charges in Britain last week, and her companion and co-defendant Keith May.

Miss McKinney, 27, Miss Wyoming of 1973, and May, 24, of Los Angeles have been missing since last Wednesday when they jumped bail rather than face trial May 2 in England on kidnapping charges.

On Monday, Scotland Yard requested the RCMP to help locate the couple and the RCMP said today they believed the two had fled to the U.S.

Police said Miss McKinney and May, travelling in disguise as deaf mutes, arrived in Toronto last Wednesday night.

There have been reports that the couple entered the U.S. through Windsor, Ont., as quickly as they could after reaching Canada and that Miss McKinney has relatives in Detroit.

Long-Lived Isopods Now Face Death

By MOLLY IVINS
New York Times

SOCORRO, N.M. — In a small, tear-shaped pond near the Socorro Mountains lives a colony of water creatures who are about to become the first species of crustaceans put on the U.S. government's list of endangered species.

The Socorro isopod is a cousin of the shrimp and the lobster, but looks more like a sow bug or pill bug that can swim.

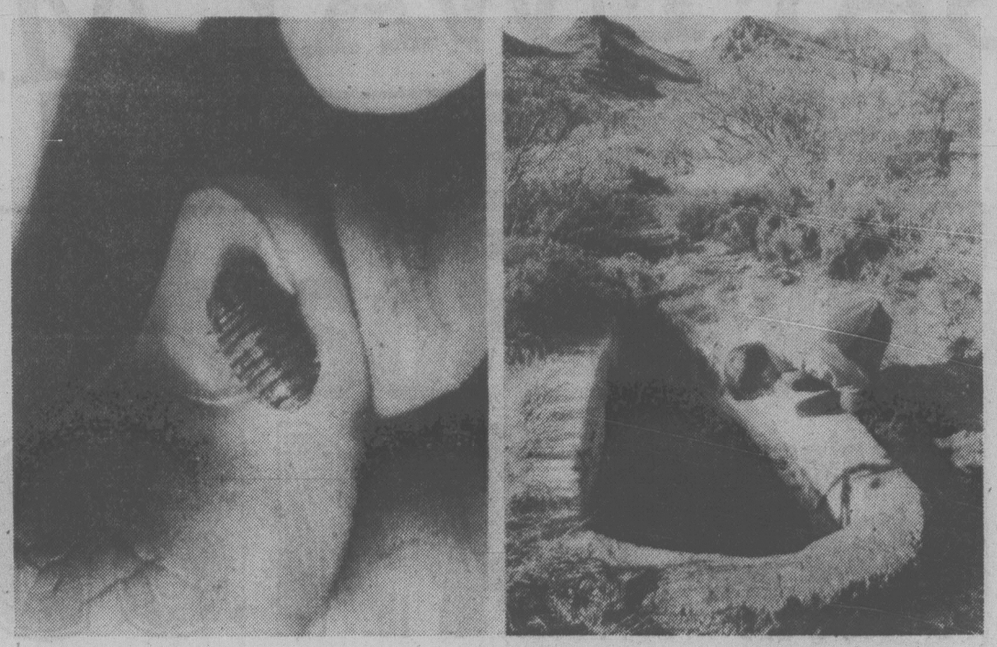

Isopods are not, at first glance, very impressive little fellows, but they are so stubborn and skilled at adaptation that they have been around for 130 million years. The great-to-the-umpteenth power grandfathers of the isopods now swimming around in their last habitat were long-time settlers when dinosaurs came to roam the area. Man, a Johnny-come-lately of a near 75,000 years, may yet manage to wipe out the last colony of the isopods.

But not if Mike Hatch of the New Mexico Fish and Game Department can do anything about it. Hatch, 26 years old, is a happy man. He has a job he loves so much he works at it 16 hours a day. His assignment is to find and, if possible, save rare water creatures. And Hatch waxes poetic over grumpy-looking fish and can remain absorbed for hours in the subtleties of the minnow. He has been called "the father of the isopod" but says modestly that he thinks "foster parent" would be more accurate.

"These little critters are real survivors," Hatch said of the isopods. "They developed when New Mexico was covered by a sea and have remained virtually unchanged through all the millions of years. As the sea receded, they made the change from saline to fresh water, living in the thermal springs. Man has wiped out their native habitat. There's not a square inch that hasn't been interfered with. They've been totally displaced and much of the brethren wiped out. There are about 2,500 of them left in this one place. The thermal springs are a stable eco-system — there are three of these springs right around here and two of them are linked up with this drainage ditch, where the last colony of isopods live."

More than a year ago, Hatch, who spends much of his time reading esoteric literature, came across a reference by an early visitor to the hot springs about the bug-like creatures that live there. So he and a partner went out hunting for them.

"We found lots of neat goodies," he said, "but the day we found the isopods, it was like we'd just made a touchdown in a big game. We screamed and hugged each other — we clowned around a lot. But you know, I really felt like handing out cigars."

Closeup of an isopod, and the drainage pond which may be its last refuge.

Hatch has since been studying the isopods, some of which are now in his laboratory in Albuquerque.

He submitted the isopods for the endangered species list in September 1976, but months went by with no word from Washington. Eventually someone called and told Hatch that no action had been taken because everyone in Washington had assumed that the nomination was a joke. "He said whenever they needed a good laugh, they'd take out my nomination of the isopod and read it over." Hatch, who is fond of his isopods, was slightly offended.

As things stand now, if no one objects, the isopods will officially be added to the endangered species list, the first crustaceans to make the list.

This would mean that Hatch could get federal help in trying to protect them. He worries about the isopods a lot. A few months ago, someone came to clean out the drainage ditch and killed about 500 of them, tossing them out of their pond along with some clogging vegetable matter. Hatch asked that their location not be specifically given for fear that some crank might try to destroy them deliberately.

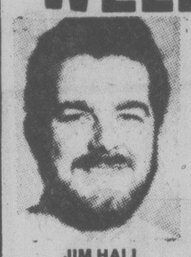

"I have a hard time getting people interested in saving them," he said. "You know how game wardens are. If I told them there was a rogue isopod loose down here, throwning boulders on the highway, they'd come in a flash. I'm always surprised by the limits of man's affection for the lower life forms. Everyone likes puppies and kittens and baby deer, but that's about as far as it goes. I must admit that some of the fish I save are terribly ugly, but I always have had a tendency to take the side of the underdog." Hatch, who is a religious man, speculates that for all anyone knows, God may look like an amoeba.

Woman Killed

BANGKOK (AP) — An elderly woman shot on a sandbar in the Mekong River by Laotian soldiers as she was trying to escape to Thailand has been cremated by sympathetic Thai villagers, the Bangkok World says.

The newspaper says a boatload of 10 Laotians crossed the river before dawn Saturday and landed on the sandbar on the Thai side of the river near Nong Khai. Laotian soldiers on the other bank spotted the group and opened fire with machine-guns, but only the woman was hit.

'Harassment' Drives IFAW to U.S.

By EDISON STEWART

FREDERICTON (CP) — The International Fund for Animal Welfare (IFAW), probably best known for its widespread campaign against the seal hunt off Newfoundland, is preparing to pack its bags and move south permanently this summer.

The reason, says executive director Brian Davies, is to escape further regulation and "harassment" from the Canadian government, something he does not expect from the United States government in the fund's new home in Massachusetts.

Davies has chosen Cape Cod for his new base, describing it as a centre for marine mammal research.

The move is prompted by the anticipation that "an organization actively working against the seal hunt probably would have obstacles put in its way that would make it impossible to continue working in Canada.

"One of the major obstacles is that we were told by the Canadian government in 1975 that if we continued encouraging Canadians to write to members of Parliament that we would lose our charitable status in Canada," he said.

"We also discovered that there would be legislation passed in the future, retroactively, that an organization that lost its charitable status would have to disperse all of its assets within the year to another organization that enjoyed a charitable status or the assets would be forfeited to the Crown.

"Rather than give up encouraging people to write to their members of Parliament, not just about the seal hunt but about anything at all, we decided we would voluntarily give up our tax status, because I don't believe unless you lobby legislators anything very good is going to happen for animals or the environment.

"So we voluntarily gave it up in 1975."

He said the IFAW is recognized as a charitable organization in the U.S.

Another reason for moving, Davies said, is the general attitude toward human rights in Canada. While protesters against the IFAW's stand on the seal hunt could demonstrate outside IFAW headquarters, protesters against the seal hunt were not allowed near the hunt.

"It seems to me that Canada has something to hide when it passes laws that restrict reasonable and legitimate protest of the seal hunt to within half a mile of a seal and now half a mile of a seal hunter."

But while Davies said the U.S. seal hunt near Alaska should stop as well, he was not specific when asked whether he will champion the cause of the seals once the IFAW moves to the U.S.

"We're involved in a whole lot of areas," he said. "Now whether — if the commercial seal hunt ends, as I hope it does — we will involve ourselves with seals again, or something else, I really don't know.

"We have done a lot of work with animals in traps, more than we have done with seals in the last couple of years and we might well concentrate in that area."

But even if the IFAW does tackle the western seal question he said he doesn't expect the U.S. government will cause as much trouble as the Canadian government has.

"What the United States has that makes it difficult for governments to do that is a constitution and a specific and strong bill of rights.

"We don't have that in Canada. And I think it fair to say that there's a great deal of government abuse of the rights of the individual in this country."

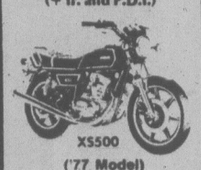

The seal hunt is only one of the battles being fought by the IFAW, Davies said.

"We work with animals in traps, we work with other marine mammals — polar bears, migratory birds . . ."

The publicity concentrated on the seal hunt, virtually ignoring the plight of other animals, is not the fault of the IFAW, Davies maintained.

"The people who make the decision about what they put on television or in the newspapers are the people who write the newspapers or own the television stations.

"I wish they did make a fuss about iguanas, I wish they did make a fuss about animals in traps. They choose to carry a fuss about seals. That's not a decision that I make."

Lawyer Ads' Decision Later

VANCOUVER (CP) — A three-member Law Society of British Columbia disciplinary committee reserved decision Tuesday on the question of advertising by lawyers after hearing final submissions in the case of solicitor Don Jabour and his legal services clinic.

Jabour, former chairman of the B.C. Legal Services Commission, is charged with conduct unbecoming a member of the society because he advertised the Feb. 1 opening of his legal clinic, along with sample fees for services, and erected an illuminated sign at his premises.

The committee, headed by chairman Howie Hamilton of Penticton, heard final arguments from law society counsel James Macaulay and Ja- lawyer Bryan

...ested by- ...ase are fed- ...mes Act investiga- tors.

Jabour, who kept the society informed of his plans to advertise, said in an interview during a break in proceedings that his legal services clinic is "going great guns" despite the controversy surrounding it.

The disciplinary committee now will draft a report for the law society benchers on the question of Jabour's guilt or innocence. If cited by the committee, Jabour could be reprimanded, fined, suspended or disbarred.

Jabour can also go to the B.C. Supreme Court if the committee rules against him.

Last month, Mr. Justice R. P. Anderson dismissed an application for an injunction that would have prohibited the committee from trying the case until some of the legalities were ironed out. But the judge gave Jabour leave to reapply on 24 hours notice.

Jabour contends that advertising his fees and practice did not constitute conduct unbecoming a law society member. He says the law society strictures on advertising are a contravention of the Combines Act.

"Any restriction on informational advertising of this nature would contravene provisions of the Combines Investigations Act of 1976," Williams argued.

Although the law society says advertising is forbidden in its internal administrative regulations, these rules have no force of law, said Williams.

He also said the Combines Act must take precedence over B.C.'s Legal Professions Act, which empowers the society to regulate the promotional activities of its members, but gives the benchers no express powers of prohibition.

Macaulay argued that the Combines Act was not intended to regulate the activities of professional bodies such as law societies, "organized in watertight provincial compartments," and solidly inside provincial jurisdiction.

In a reference to Combines Act investigators' interest in the B.C. situation, Macaulay said it "would appear the director of combines is considering an invalid incursion into provincial responsibility."

Macaulay said Jabour's advertising was misleading as well as contrary to society ethical standards. He said many society members complained that the fees advertised by Jabour's clinic were actually higher or the same as those they were charging in conventional unadvertised practices.

"The character of the advertising was of a type that would cause members of the public to infer he charged fees less than those charged by other members of the profession," said Macaulay.

Canada Hopes for Sea Law Gains

By AB KENT
Times Staff—

Canada's chief chartmaker hopes the current session in Geneva will settle the major outstanding issues facing the Law of the Sea Conference.

Gerry Ewing, dominion hydrographer for the Canadian Hydrographic Service, expressed the hope Tuesday to delegates at the annual Canadian Hydrographic Conference at the Institute of Ocean Sciences, Patricia Bay.

He was referring particularly to areas such as marine research and the establishment of an international body to deal with concerns outside national jurisdictions, including exploitation of the seabed.

There are economic implications in the latter, both for seaboard and non-maritime nations, and Canada is considered a global power when it comes to offshore claims.

He said preparations are in full swing in Ottawa for the International Hydrographic Technical Conference Canada will host in April 1979.

Theme of the conference will be development of ocean resources.

Much more knowledge of the ocean bottom is essential to properly manage the oil and mineral resources to be found there, Ewing said.

Among papers to be delivered will be one on Dome petroleum operations in the Beaufort sea.

That was Canada's first experience with offshore Arctic drilling.

Keynote speaker will be Alan Beesley Canada's delegate to the Law of the Sea Conference, who is high commissioner to Australia. Among the subjects to be dealt with are sea bottom mapping, location and emplacement of ocean floor devices, jurisdiction, education and training.

Ewing reported progress on a new system of aerial surveying of shallow waters being undertaken jointly by the hydrographic service and the Canadian Centre for Remote Sensing, a branch of energy, mines and resources.

Aircraft are doing final tests on the system, which he said offers a quantum jump in Canada's ability to survey shallow areas.

Using a combination of color photography and laser beam, a survey aircraft can map the bottom of waters up to 60 feet deep, depending on surface conditions and turbidity.

For oceanographers, the technique will be like moving from lead lines to echo sounders, Ewing predicted.

In a paper on Canada's involvement in the Pacific warning system, hydrographer Sid Wigen urged the establishment of wave measuring devices on the Canadian coast as an example to other nations situated in the high-risk area.

Together, he said, Pacific rim countries could improve the warning system for $2—$5 million with the potential to save many lives from the devastation of large ocean waves that sometimes follow offshore earthquakes.

The outlay could provide about 100 automated tidal wave monitoring stations to accelerate the advance warning now available with non-automated apparatus.

Canada is in the forefront of tidal monitoring technology and is therefore in a good position to lead others, Wigen said.

He noted there have been 21 tidal waves on the west coast of Vancouver Island since 1900.

The conference, attended by 240 delegates from Canada, the U.S., U.K., France, Sweden, Ghana and Algeria, continues Thursday.

It includes a display of the latest in hydrographic and navigation electronics and a number of survey ships carrying examples of such gear for their regular assignments.

The Bridge Expert

When today's deal was played in the 1977 World Championships, the West defenders had an opportunity to show their world class. Three of them did. One of the three was Ron Von der Porten, of the United States.

North-South vulnerable. South deals.

Opening lead: King of ◇.

After winning the opening lead with the king of diamonds, the queston was what to lead to trick two. Having taken a few moments to deliberate, Von der Porten led the jack of hearts. As he viewed it, he had to assume that East possessed the heart ace. If South held that card, the defense appeared to be hopeless.

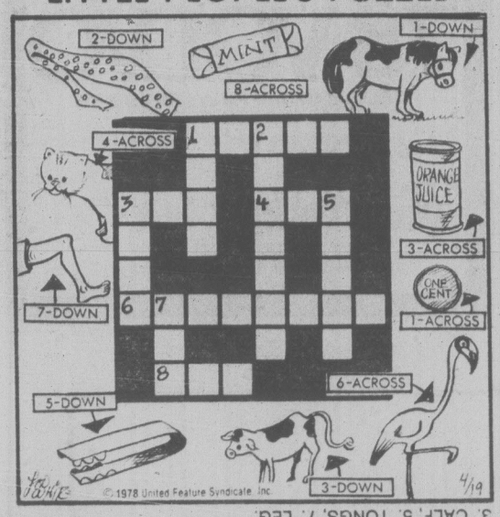

When a low heart was played from dummy, East did likewise, with the jack winning the trick. Next came the eight of hearts to East's ace, after which East returned a third heart, West's king taking the setting trick.

It will be noted that if West's jack of hearts had been covered by dummy's queen, the result would have been the same. East would have captured the trick with his ace and returned a heart. South's remaining 10-4 would now be trapped by West's K-8; and, once again, the defenders would have made three heart tricks.

It should also be noted that if West, at trick two, had led his eight of hearts (instead of the jack), South almost surely would have made a heart trick. He would have played low from dummy, and East would have won the trick with his ace (if he didn't, South's ten would capture the trick). Dummy would now possess the Q-6 of hearts over West's K-J; and South, by leading a heart out of his own hand, would make a winner out of the queen.

Had West not led a heart at trick two, South would have been able to discard one of his three hearts on dummy's king of clubs. At most tables, where a heart was not led at trick two, South fulfilled his contract.

SOLUTIONS THURSDAY

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Astrological Forecast for Thursday, April 20
By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (Mar. 21-Apr. 19): Emphasis on written word, including legal documents. Communicate, exchange thoughts, ideas. Gemini, Virgo, Sagittarius persons could figure prominently. Member of opposite sex lends spice to life. If single, marriage is key topic of conversation.

TAURUS (Apr. 20-May 20): Go slow, be diplomatic, make concession to family member. Another Taurus, a Libran and a Scorpio could figure in scenario. In matters of speculation, stick with number 6. Accent on service, dependents, pets, general physical constitution.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Good lunar aspect coincides now with adventure, speculation, love. One who pursues you might have ulterior motive. Protect self in emotional clinches. Strive for realistic view — see places, people as they are, not merely as you wish they could be.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Build, organize, solidify claims, count money and blessings. Nothing now is apt to occur halfway — it is all or nothing. Another Cancer — and a Capricorn — figure in scenario. Stick with number 8. Older individual could become valuable ally.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Finish what you start — develop ideas into valid concepts. Aries, Libra figure in scenario. Accent on close of the transaction, recognition long due. Remove safety hazards from residence. Promote greater degree of security.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Accent on finances, payments, collections, necessity for protecting valuables and counting your change. New approach, added independence work in your favor. Leo, Aquarius figure prominently — so does the number 1.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Cycle high — get going, be self-starter. Get off sidelines — become full participant. Wear bright colors. Display balanced, sunny disposition. Love is in picture. One you care for returns compliment twofold.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Restrictions may seem to multiply. In actuality, delays give you time for second wind. Cycle is such that you are on brink of discovery, recognition. Know it and be optimistic. Visit individual confined to home or hospital.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Accent on friendship, pleasure of companionship, shared hopes and wishes. Your sensitivity and affection surge to forefront. Libra and Aquarius figure prominently. One in authority gives you good news concerning financial security.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Open lines of communication. Check messages. Protect yourself by putting ideas on paper. Write thoughts, suggestions. You're due promotion, more authority, raise in pay. Superior appreciates your efforts and may prove it.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Publishing, advertising, improving quality of your lifestyle — these are spotlighted. Taurus, Libra, Scorpio figure in scenario. Distance, communication, travel, philosophy command attention. Catch up correspondence.

PISCES (Feb. 19-Mar. 20): Intuition, psychic or occult experiences dominate. Partner or mate relates unusual dream. Money in picture. Mistery solved if you streamline procedures. Another Pisces — and a Virgo — figure in scenario. Stick with number 7. Your extrasensory perception on target.

IF APRIL 20 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are sensitive, stubborn, emotional and loyal to family. Cancer, Capricorn persons play important roles in your life. In May, you finish important assignment or project. In June, wedding bells could ring. If already married, you "rediscover" mate. By October, you will be ready for major change that could involve travel or publishing. Digestive problem can be resolved if you adhere to recent resolution concerning diet and nutrition.

FUN WITH FIGURES

By J. A. H. HUNTER

We have 6889 for the game today. One 9, two 8's, and one 6. Using all four each time, but no other digits at all, you form expressions for the consecutive numbers from one up.

Any arithmetical signs may be used, but no summation or factorial symbols, and no words. Don't forget decimals, regular and repeater, also powers and roots. For example, 88 — 9 + 6 is a solution for 85.

The limit without a break in continuity seems to be 106. I shall be glad to check solutions, and will send hints to help in future games if requested.

Coldframe Handy in Spring

It takes a long, slow spring for the home gardener to appreciate having a coldfame. Not that this spring is much different to many others; it just seems that way because we forget past weather.

Flowering annual seeds sown at the end of January indoors have been clamoring to go out for the past three weeks but many nights have been clear, causing frost at dawn, and winds are sometimes boisterous.

Snapdragons and lobelias, two annuals needing early indoor sowing, are hardy enough to cool weather at the fall end of their flowering, but when raised in greenhouse or porch warmth, the young plants must be gradually accustomed to cooler conditions before being planted into garden areas.

This is where the coldframe pays for its construction. After being pricked out separately into flats to give space for good roots, the flats are better in a frame than in window light indoors.

Stand the flats either on a gravel or sand base within the frame. Raising them on bricks or flat stones will do. This allows for drainage and is a little warmer than resting on the damp soil. And the bottom of the flats last longer if not constantly damp.

Overhead light through the glass frame cover is ideal for keeping the young plants in sturdy growth, the cover affording protection from chill and wind at night; and excessive rain during any period.

On mild days with little wind, the frame cover must be raised at the corners to prevent overheating, for this weakens the plants.

Pieces of old brick or wood blocks two inches thick do this job very well, as a space of about three inches is enough. A warm quiet day is ideal for first total removal of the glass, standing it safely where a sudden wind cannot send it crashing down. A plastic cover must be looked after as carefully for although it will not shatter, it may tear.

Watering when needed must be done early in the day for the surplus should disappear before closing the frame around 6 p.m. Avoid overwatering at this stage; give enough to keep the soil damp.

The hardier vegetable seedlings also go into a coldrame for this "hardening off" period as it is known.

Even hardy kale, lettuce and cabbages need this treatment after being raised from seed sown in the house or greenhouse.

By early May, the hardy flower and vegetable plants now in frames will be put into their garden spaces. The coldrame provides protection for tomato plants in six-inch pots. These plants should grow into fine strong specimens with flowers just opening before wheather at the end of May is suitable for planting out. It may even be June before they can go into a sheltered, sunny spot in the garden.

With plants growing well and strongly in a carefully tended coldrame, the spring will no longer seem slow.

HOW TO WRITE A GOOD CLASSIFIED ACTION AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room etc., for rent, or property for sale; start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably when given complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient advisor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. for you daily, Monday through Friday; 8:00 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Saturday. Don't allow the reader to speculate

AIR CLEANER FOR ELK FALLS

CAMPBELL RIVER — A recovery boiler scrubbing system to improve air quality control will be installed at Crown Zellberbach's Elk Falls pulp and paper mill near here at a cost of $5.8 million, mill manager Jim Christensen said Tuesday.

The new system is the third step in a program to reduce odor and the emission of particulate matter, he said.

"When we have all this new equipment operating, it should significantly improve air quality," Christensen said.

While it isn't possible to eliminate all odor from a kraft mill, he said the new scrubbers will reduce it about 50 per cent.

The recovery boiler scrubbing system, planned for completion at the end of next year, will replace an older, less efficient air scrubbing system, he said.

Kidnapping a Political Tactic

ASSOCIATED PRESS

In a wave of crimes, Europe's political extremists and ransom-seeking kidnappers recently have preyed on the wealthy and the powerful to promote their ideologies or increase their fortunes.

The most prominent victim of political kidnappers is former Italian premier Aldo Moro, who was seized March 16 in Rome by Red Brigades terrorists who killed his five bodyguards.

A letter signed by that group was received Tuesday saying Moro had been "executed" and the body dumped in Lake Duchessa 115 kilometres northeast of Rome.

But police said searchers found no body and that there is no proof Moro is dead.

The Moro abduction resembled the kidnapping last Sept. 5 in Cologne, West Germany, of industrialist Hanns-Martin Schleyer, a Daimler-Benz firm board member. He was seized by gunmen who killed his driver and three bodyguards.

Schleyer's body was found in the trunk of a car in Mulhouse, France, on Oct. 19, the day after West German commandos foiled a Lufthansa airliner hijacking in Mogadishu, Somalia. Schleyer's kidnappers and the hijackers were reported connected with West Germany's Baader-Meinhof gang of terrorists.

The hijackers demanded the release of 11 terrorists jailed in West Germany. West German police are looking for about 40 persons in connection with the Schleyer case. One suspect, Christoph Wackernagel, was arrested last December in the Netherlands.

There is evidence that the same West German gang shot and killed Frankfurt banker Jurgen Ponto last July 30 at his home during a kidnapping attempt and assassinated West Germany's chief federal prosecutor, Siegfried Buback, last April in Karlsruhe. The same terrorists are blamed for the Nov. 10, 1974, slaying of West Berlin Senior Judge Guenter von Drenkmann during an attempted kidnapping.

Baron Charles-Victor Bracht, 63, a wealthy Belgian businessman, was kidnapped March 7 from an underground parking lot near his Antwerp office. His body was found April 10 in a garbage dump at Oelegen near his home. Police said he had been shot in the back of the head soon after he was seized.

His kidnappers demanded a $1.6 million-$2.2 million ransom but it was not paid for lack of proof that Bracht was alive. Four suspects have been arrested.

Police work freed Belgian millionaire Baron Edouard-Jean Empain, 40, who was seized Jan. 23 near his home in Paris. Three days later his kidnappers mailed the tip of his little finger to police and demanded a ransom estimated at about $10 million. Two months later, police set up a phoney ransom drop south of Paris.

When the suspects approached, police opened fire, killing one kidnapper and wounding another, Alain Caillol, 36, who was arrested. Caillol telephoned his confederates and asked them to release Empain, which they did March 26. The baron was dropped off in the Paris suburbs and took the subway to town where he called his wife from a phone booth.

Three kidnappers in West Germany grabbed Prince Moritz von Hessen, 51, a grandson of the late King Victor Emmanuel of Italy, on Monday but they were captured 90 minutes later at a police roadblock. Police said the abductors apparently were common criminals and not politically motivated.

OFFICERS QUIT U.K. FORCES

LONDON (Reuter) — Britain's armed forces are facing a possible shortage of officers, the defence ministry says. It said 977 army and 450 air force officers have asked for early releases this year, most because of low pay. An army captain in Britain or the equivalent rank in other services—the most common rank for resignations—makes between £90 and £100 ($180 and $200) a week.

Warsaw Ghetto Site Now a City Square

WARSAW (AP) — Little children play now in a big downtown square on the site of the Warsaw Ghetto, where the Jews launched their heroic and hopeless uprising against the Nazis 35 years ago today.

The Germans created the ghetto by rounding up Jews from different parts of Poland and segregating them in an old quarter of the city. In 1940, they forced the Jews to build a wall around the area, sealing it off from the rest of the city.

By early 1943 the Nazis had shipped 300,000 Jews from the ghetto to the gas chambers of the Treblinka extermination camp.

On April 19, 1943, some of the 100,000 people remaining in the ghetto opened fire on the Nazis in a last, deperate attempt to "save human dignity," Yurek Wilner, a leader of the uprising, said at the time.

The last bunker, on Mila Street, fell May 8, 19 days after the uprising began. Mordechai Anielewicz, commander of the uprising, was buried in the rubble.

Only a few of the ghetto's fighters escaped. They crawled through sewers to the Polish side of town and later joined the Polish partisans. The Germans razed the ghetto.

The only signs of the uprising today are the black stone slabs of the Ghetto Memorial.

Parts of Warsaw that were levelled by the Germans in a Polish uprising a year later have been reconstructed. But modern buildings cover the site of the ghetto in the centre of this capital of 1.5 million people.

Januz Wieczorek, chairman of the Polish Second World War Fighting and Martyrdom Commission, said at the Auschwitz concentration camp Monday that Poles did all they could to help the Jews in their struggle.

"We know there is some propaganda in the West charging the Polish community with passive acceptance of the Nazi 'final solution of the Jewish problem,' " he said "But we are not ashamed of anything. We know what we have done."

Yad Vashem, an Israeli organization, plans to decorate 19 Poles for aiding Jews during the occupation, when such help was punishable by death.

"Those who died never wanted to be identified as a Pole or a Jew," Wieczorek said. "A white-and-red Polish flag hung beside the Jewish one over the ghetto bunkers."

Wieczorek was speaking at the dedication of a permanent exhibit of the Jewish martyrdom to mark the ghetto uprising. Among those attending the ceremony was Nahum Goldmann, 83-year-old founder-president of the World Jewish Congress.

New Labor Law

TOKYO (AP) — North Korea's Supreme People's Assembly has adopted a socialist labor law providing for eight hours of work, eight hours of rest and eight hours of study, the North Korean news agency reports. The law, which becomes effective May 1, was introduced by President Kim Il-sung at the opening of the second session of the assembly, the agency said.

Tea Party Grant

A $5,600 grant for the Oak Bay Tea Party was approved by Oak Bay council's finance committee Tuesday.

The grant was requested by the Oak Bay Board of Trade.

Ald John Goult noted the revenue from the rides accounted for only $1,400 of a budget in the $20,000 range.

Ald Shirley Dowell said she would like to see a return to the fun-fair theme, such as bobbing appples instead of "greasers taking the children's money away from them."

Best Bleeders

CAR OWNERS ARGUE FOR INFORMATION

OTTAWA (CP) — A freedom-of-information act would have saved owners of rusty Fords and defect-plagued Firenzas money and aggravation, a Senate-Commons committee studying freedom of government information was told Tuesday.

"We were not getting the information from studies conducted by the department of transport on car-related problems," said Jeff Lyon, vice-president of Sunshine, a group calling for more access to government files.

Sunshine presented a brief calling for more access to government information, a clear definition of national security and an appeal mechanism via the courts to decisions made by an ombudsman on access to government information.

Lyon, who said he is spokesman for several consumer groups, including owners of General Motors-built Firenzas and the Rusty Ford Association, said studies done for years in some cases were made available after recalls were started by manufacturers.

General Motors sold compact Firenzas in Canada in 1971-72 but discontinued their manufacture after publicity over the car's 16 alleged defects killed sales, he said.

Lyon said the transport department commissioned a study on the Firenza by a Carleton University professor before sales stopped but refused to make it public.

General Motors was able to hide behind the study's conclusion that problems were caused by a lack of maintenance, Lyon said.

"We wanted to refute the findings and eventually got the report leaked; that's not the form of government we want to see."

MP Simma Holt (L-Vancouver-Kingsway) said civil servants who leak documents are sleazy and should step forward on principle with information.

"We shouldn't have to depend on the John Dean's for information," Mrs. Holt said. Dean was an aide to former U.S. president Richard Nixon who broke the Watergate burglary affair open by testifying against White House staff.

But Mrs. Holt said she is concerned that pressure groups such as Sunshine create more bureaucracy and a potentially dangerous situation in prisons by opening files to the public.

The Human Rights Commission has received more than 50 applications from prisoners to see government files on them, she said.

In the files are interviews with friends, neighbors and others that may put these people in considerable danger, Mrs. Holt said after the meeting.

People in the U.S. have been killed after information of this type was revealed, she said.

Mrs. Holt called for a moratorium on freedom of information to prisoners until there is some alternative.

U.S. TECHNICIANS IMPRESSED BY CRAFTSMANSHIP

UVic Concert Hall Fine Tuned

By AUDREY JOHNSON
Times Staff

Everybody knows that pianos are tuned sometimes; that string and wind instruments and timpani are tuned frequently all through a performance. Many people know that a whole orchestra tunes to the sound of the oboe's "A".

But how many of us know that a hall can be tuned?

Or that a hall should be tuned if it is to fulfill ideally, its purpose of providing a perfect space in which to make music.

The novelty of tuning a hall is understandable because it is a rare refinement which may never have been undertaken before in this city. Only the greatest concert halls, lovingly and specifically designed, are carried through to the ultimate perfecting, as was done recently in the still-under-wraps concert hall in the new University of Victoria centre.

It occupied musicians and technicians for two days in more or less two stages — the precisely scientific and the esthetic.

The first "surround" hall to be built in Canada (one is planned for Toronto which will be the new Massey Hall), nothing has been left undone to ensure to the best of all modern human resources, a perfect milieu for the performance mainly of music, but also of the spoken word.

In the first tests, an instrument emitting an edgy sound is combined with a beam of light and aimed around the hall. When an echo comes back the light beam locates its source.

Later came actual performance tests; the trying out of the effectiveness of certain factors in a concert situation. Among the factors is a stage floor of oak that is stained but not varnished because varnish interferes with the responsiveness of the wood to sound waves.

Then there are curtains hidden in slots in certain walls which can be extended by remote control to change the resonance for some kinds of performance.

And there are the banners. Designed by outstanding fabrics artist, Carole Sabiston; large, simple but handsome, repeating the warm terracotta tones of the seat upholstery, they are suspended around the walls behind the performance area.

They can remain in place or, electronically controlled, disappear silently upward.

Above the performance area are "clouds" — clusters of angled cedarwood squares that also descend or rise according to need. First with a rehearsal session of the UVic chorus and orchestra, and then with a string quartet, tests were made of all these functions.

To locate the perfect area on the stage for a chamber group such as the quartet to be positioned, a large square of white paper was laid out and moved about until the situation was defined.

The musicians and the few listeners scattered about were delighted with the results and impressed with the simplicity of some improvements. Certain overtones of the higher strings were fading for listeners in the upper back area of the balcony.

Patching together a three-foot high baffle of plywood and setting it behind the quartet, cured the problem. Architect Terence J. Williams of the Wade Williams Partnership, the firm responsible for the University Centre, immediately made a note to design a screen to be used for that particular purpose.

George Corwin, UVic chorus and orchestra conductor, has one word for the concert hall — "Fantastic!"

The idea of a university centre building as a campus focal point, containing a concert hall and art gallery, originated, says Corwin, with former UVic professor, Hugh Farquhar. "But what has been achieved," he says, "is beyond anything we imagined then."

Concerning the Taylor concert rehearsal a couple of weeks ago, Corwin says the intonation improved amazingly in the space of three hours because the musicians could hear each other properly for the first time.

In the acoustical design, sound isolation has been of primary concern. That is isolation of sounds from within going out, and exterior sounds intruding.

Double walls and roof with moving air between, all ducts lined with acoustically absorbant material, are part of the means by which this desirable situation has been achieved.

Also the velocity of air movement in the heating and air conditioning systems has been kept very low resulting in not even a hiss of sound being audible to audiences. Inclined planes, textured concrete and cedar panelling of interior finishing all contribute to the acoustical design.

The visual impact and comfort of the hall is equally satisfying. A cascade of balconies and main floor seating almost completely envelope the large stage, so that, even though 1,300 people can be accommodated in comfort with ample leg-stretch space between rows, one is unlikely to lose the sense of intimacy — of close exchange between performers and audience.

Stage facilities include a section of the floor that can be removed to provide an orchestra pit which will accommodate 25 to 40 musicians; dressing rooms, instrument storage and greenroom on the main level and a warm-up room for musicians above.

Design of the catwalk high above the performance area, from which various adjustments of lights and amplification are made, has been the subject of great admiration on the part of the United States consultants who say it is one of the most sophisticated they have encountered.

In fact Schultz, Auerbach and their team are delighted with the whole design and execution and they have summed up their enthusiasm in one eyebrow-raising sentence: "If you want craftsmanship, come to Canada."

For all intents and purposes, the hall is now complete except for a few small details. The final tuning will take place in September with audinces present for a series of performances, several of which will be given by community organizations and visitors.

LOCATION SHIFT FOR CRAFT FAIR

After seven years in the University of Victoria Student Union Building, the eighth annual Spring Craft Faire will take place Friday and Saturday at a new central spot — the McPherson Playhouse.

Hours will be from 11 a.m. to 7:30 p.m. Friday and 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday.

About 33 craftspeople and artists from the island and the Gulf Islands will display and sell some of their outstanding work.

Those represented this year include potters Robin Righton and Linda Mackie, and Sheila Steele and Bob Hunt from Qualicum Beach; weavers Lily Bohlin and Frances Hunter; Sanara de Goutiere's doll sculpture and Susan Kane's puppets.

In the fine arts section will be Margaret Berry's silkscreens and Penny Peck and Christine Richards will display a wide variety of their landscape watercolors depicting scenes from local coastal waters.

Welfare for Men?

WINNIPEG (CP) — Manitoba's Law Reform Commission Tuesday recommended that fathers who retain custody of their children after marriage breakdown be eligible for welfare assistance.

In "an informal report" made to Attorney-General Gerry Mercier the commission said that women are able to receive assistance under The Social Allowances Act, but men can only get help if they're over 65, disabled or in school.

The commission indicated that current legislation discriminates against male single parents.

Moro Trail Turns Cold

ROME (AP) — Searchers for the body of former premier Aldo Moro dynamited the icy cover of Lake Duchessa and drained a quarry today but found no trace of the kidnapped political leader. Speculation grew that the Red Brigades' announcement of his "execution" was a ruse.

Divers, trained mountain dogs and hundreds of others continued searching in and around the snowbound lake 115 kilometres northeast of Rome, where a communique received Tuesday said the body would be found.

Experts said the message appeared to have been written by the terrorists who grabbed Moro March 16 and killed his five bodyguards. But no trace of the body was found, leading officials to speculate that the communique was a trick to take police away from the hunt for the kidnappers or a hoax to further the terrorists' psychological warfare against the "bourgeois" state.

The search was widened under floodlights during the night to a flooded stone quarry beside a highway 10 kilometres from the lake. Investigators said the metal fence between the road and the quarry had been cut, and there were signs of automobile tire tracks on the ground. However, the search turned up nothing.

Doubt of the message's authenticity also was cast when the Milan newspaper Corriere della Sera quoted a lawyer for Red Brigades leaders being tried in Turin as saying they "do not recognize the style of the Red Brigades in the message."

PRESTO SEATS FILLED

Debate dragged on in the legislature Tuesday night before the near-empty rows of government and opposition benches — until a television cameraman began setting up his equipment.

First to return to the chamber was Premier Bill Bennett, quickly followed by three cabinet ministers.

All except eight of the government's 35 members were in their chairs when the filming by BCTV began, and many quickly vacated their posts once the cameraman packed up.

Also absent were eight of the 18 NDP members and the sole Liberal and Conservative members.

FRANCE WON'T COMMENT

Neutron Bomb Test

PARIS (UPI) — France has exploded a neutron bomb in the Pacific in a top-secret test of the controversial weapon, the newspaper France Soir and the magazine Le Point reported today.

French military experts said they believed it was the first time a neutron bomb had been set off anywhere.

"France has exploded its first neutron bomb," France Soir said in a banner headline.

"In the greatest of secrecy and on an experimental basis in the Pacific, France has exploded its first neutron bomb," the newspaper said.

The French defence ministry said it would neither confirm nor deny the report. A spokesmen said government policy was not to discuss publicly France's test plans and progress on perfecting the nation's nuclear weapons program.

"France has experimented a neutron bomb in the Pacific ... France has completed with its own means its research on the neutron bomb," France Soir said.

It said it would take three or four years to make the bomb "operational."

Le Point, considered a reliable French news magazine, said that "France has just made a test of the bomb."

The state-owned radio France-Inter carried the France Soir report and the Paris daily Le Figaro cited unconfirmed reports that a neutron bomb had been tested off the Mururoa atoll, at the French nuclear testing center in the Pacific.

France-Soir said a high-ranking army officer described the neutron bomb explosion as "a full scale laboratory test." It said French military experts are working on adapting the bomb to an automatic 155 canon.

In Washington the Pentagon at first declined comment on whether the United states had previously set off a neutron warhead. But a Pentagon spokesman said later: "It is very reasonable to assume that if the president was considering a production decision on enhanced radiation (neutron) weapons, that such testing should have taken place to some degree."

Sources at the Nevada Nuclear Test Site, however, said last year that at least two neutron bombs had been exploded in underground tests at the desert site during the last several years. Federal officials did not deny the report. Barring accidental "vents," such underground tests do not release radiation into the atmosphere.

A U.S.State Department spokesman said the department had no information on the reported French explosion.

The report of the test came only weeks after President Carter made a controversial decision to delay production of a neutron warhead, which kills by massive radiation but leaves buildings largely intact.

Carter demanded that the Soviet Union make similar moves to cool the international arms race.

The neutron warhead, designed chiefly to be mounted on short and intermediate range rockets, was being developed to destroy enemy troop concentrations and tanks. Russia and the Warsaw Pact nations have massed forces in Europe which greatly outnumber those of the NATO allies.

The French military experts said that if President Valery Giscard d'Estaing decides to go ahead with the production of the weapon,

Panama Treaties Passed

PANAMA CITY (AP) — Cheering in the streets of Panama City, jubilation in the White House, and relief in the U.S. Senate greeted final approval of the Panama canal treaties.

But there were predictions in Washington that the controversy and debate will continue as the House of Representatives considers legislation to implement the treaties, which gradually give Panama control of the canal during the next 22 years and which guarantee the waterway's continued neutrality thereafter.

Speaking on television, Gen. Omar Torrijos, Panama's chief-of-state, said he had been prepared to resort to violence if the second treaty had been defeated. To submit the issue to new negotiations with the United States, he said, "would mean shame, the negation of sovereignty."

Torrijos told a news conference that if the Senate had not ratified the treaty, "we were going to take the route of violent liberation."

"By tommorrow the canal would not have been in operation," he said.

But Torrijos obviously was relieved and elated at the Senate's 68-to-32 approval of the second pact Tuesday.

"This treaty ends colonialism," he said. "I feel proud that I accomplished our mission. The ratification of the Senate buries the treaty that was imposed on us in 1903 and from the body has emerged a new treaty based on mutual respect."

The package's approval, they said, was a retreat from national greatness and ignored the fervent wishes of the great majority of U.S. citizens.

But President Carter said he is convinced Americans eventually will accept the treaties as being in "the best interest of our nation."

"These treaties can mark the beginning of a new era in our relations, not only with Panama, but with all the rest of the world," Carter said.

U.S. DOLLAR RISE SLOWS

Times News Services

The U.S. dollar's four-day rise lost some of its momentum today as profit-taking set in on European markets, but the U.S. currency still made slight gains at the start of trading.

Tel to Cut Extra Tax

B.C. Tel Tuesday announced it will rebate excess sales tax charged customers in the March 15 to April 15 billing period.

A spokesman for the company said the rebate is at the direction of the provincial government but will involve only a small amount of money, about 10 cents.

The company's computer was programmed to charge a full seven per cent sales tax for the March 15 to April 15 period, although the tax fell to five per cent on April 11.

Daoud Held To Assure Ceasefire

BEIRUT (AP) — Guerrilla leader Yasser Arafat has arrested 130 followers of Abu Daoud, suspected mastermind of the Munich Olympics massacre, to ensure a moratorium on military operations against Israeli forces in southern Lebanon, reliable Palestinian sources said today.

They said the battlefield crackdown occurred a few hours after Arafat made the moratorium pledge to UN Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim during their 70-minute meeting in Beirut Monday.

The detainees belong to a hardline wing led by Daoud in Arafat's own guerrilla group, Al Fatah, and they attempted to defy the moratorium, the sources said.

The arrests are of a temporary nature and the detainees will be freed once they are removed from the southern front, the sources said.

The withdrawal of Israeli forces may be speeded up as a result of efforts by Waldheim to increase the size of the international force there, Israeli radio said.

Waldheim said during a visit to the UNIFIL Tuesday that he hopes to be able to increase the size of the force to 6,000 men from 4,000 because of the larger area to be guarded.

Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin has told him that while Israel is eager to withdraw from the area, it is important not to leave a vacuum that might be filled by returning Palestinian guerrillas.

In Jerusalem, parliament today overwhelmingly elected as Israel's fifth president opposition Labor Party member Yitzhak Navon, an outspoken dove who favors talks with the Palestinians.

Rhodesian Guerrillas Protest

DAR ES SALAAM (Reuter) — Britain and the United States were accused Tuesday of playing down positive results of negotiations here during the weekend with black Rhodesian guerrilla leaders.

A senior Tanzanian government source said U.S. State Secretary Cyrus Vance and British Foreign Secretary David Owen have emphasized points of disagreement despite concessions by the black nationalists.

"The British and Americans let us down," he said. "They were not really prepared for agreement here."

The two Western envoys conferred with Robert Mugabe and Doshua Nkomo, leaders of the militant Patriotic Front which has waged a six-year bush war against Prime Minister Ian Smith's regime in Rhodesia.

'Average' Taxpayers Helped in Que. Budget

QUEBEC (CP) — Finance Minister Jacques Parizeau brought down a $13-billion budget Tuesday, placing the emphasis squarely on tax cuts designed to redistribute wealth in keeping with the two-year-old Parti Quebecois government's commitment to social democracy.

Some 2.2. million Quebecers will share in a $313-million cut in income taxes designed to help low- and middle-income wage earners. But taxpayers in higher brackets will bear an additional burden in the 1978-79 fiscal year.

The "average" Quebec taxpayer described by Parizeau—a married man earning the province's average industrial wage of $13,700 a year—will see his tax bill drop $291 this year as a result of new exemptions which take affect immediately.

Single Quebecers who earn less than $22,000 a year and married people who earn less than $30,000 will all benefit to varying degrees, while payments will rise for taxpayers above those levels.

Parizeau also announced $48 million in new taxes on tobacco, raising the price of a large package of cigarettes by seven cents, and $18 million in penalty taxes on non-returnable bottles and cans, amounting to five cents on containers of less than 16 ounces, 10 cents on larger containers.

Parizeau had earlier announced elimination of the eight-per-cent tax on hotel rooms and some hotel meals, as well as a one-year elimination of the eight-per-cent sales tax on textiles, clothing, footwear and furniture, Quebec's weaker industries.

World Jobless Soaring to 800M

WASHINGTON (AP) — More than 800 million people will join an exploding world labor force by the year 2000, challenging nations to create enough jobs to avert massive unemployment by the end of this century, a research organization reported Tuesday.

Population Reference Bureau Inc. said more than one billion jobs will be needed in the next 22 years to provide employment for the estimated 300 million to 500 million people already unemployed as well as those that will enter the labor market.

In its just-released annual study on world population trends, the non-profit organization estimated that the world's labor force will grow from 1.7 billion people in 1978 to 2.5 billion in 2000.

As a result of record population growth in the last two decades, people in many countries are entering the job market faster than the economy can absorb them, said Thomas Kane, the bureau's research demographer.

"This trend is increasing, and by the year 2000, at least 800 million more people will be looking for work," he said.

Unemployment in industrialized nations now stands at 17 million, it is estimated, while in the developing world it is more than 300 million.

"The pressures contributing to the world's population explosion eased slightly as a result of the declining world birth rate of the 1970s," Kane said.

"Nonetheless, in coming years humanity must still brace itself for another explosion—that of its labor force."

He added that the world "must create over a billion new jobs if massive, world-wide unemployment is to be avoided by the end of this century."

The bureau's 1978 world population data sheet also reports that:

—The world's population has grown by 73 million persons since mid-1977 to an estimated 4.22 billion in mid-1978.

CROWFOOT GRITS SELECT HORNER

STETTLER, Alta. (CP) — Trade Minister Jack Horner, a Progressive Conservative MP for 19 years before his defection to the Liberals a year ago, won the federal Liberal nomination for the riding of Crowfoot Tuesday.

Results were not released, but returning officer Bob Willis said a "very heavy majority" of the 1,032 voting delegates supported Horner in his fight against late-entry Jim Smith, 30, an area high school teacher.

Horner, sole Liberal MP in Alberta, will contest the riding against Progressive Conservative MP Arnold Malone, whose Battle River constituency became part of Crowfoot under redistribution.

. . . WATCH THE BIRDIE

The red-billed ground cuckoos are the only pair in the world to mate, produce eggs and hatch a family in captivity. Zookeepers will be focusing a camera on them 24 hours a day for the next three weeks.

Ann Mayhew, publicist for the zoo, said in an interview that cuckoos at other zoos have either laid eggs and could not hatch them or hatched them and could not rear their young.

Cuckoos require a great deal of privacy, she said, adding that the camera was mounted to make sure all goes well and to study the habits of the birds without bothering them too much.

Koo and Kim hatched two eggs about a year ago and another one last fall, but started chasing and attacking their latest offspring and then had to be separated, Mrs. Mayhew said.

Money Woes Blamed on Housing Corp.

FORT McMURRAY, Alta. (CP) — Faced with massive budget deficits during the 1978 fiscal year, some members of the town board of this booming community on the edge of the Athabasca oil sands are willing to blame the Alberta Housing Corporation (AHC) for much of their difficulty.

At a special budget meeting recently when the board announced a $2.1-million deficit is possible despite provincial instructions to keep the budget balanced, discussions centred on difficulties in collecting taxes or grants in lieu of taxes from the corporation for land it controls in the municipality.

Finance director Bruce Otterdahl initially estimated in 1977 that the corporation should pay $764,000 through taxes or in lieu of taxes. After the budget was prepared, estimates of the corporation's obligation extended to $1.4 million, of which a total of $366,000 was paid.

Otterdahl said the discrepancy of more than $1 million between the amount owed and the amount received contributed greatly to Fort McMurray's financial difficulties.

"There's no magic wand that can be waved by anybody to make this budget balance without cutting service," said board member Bill Gendreau. "One major reason is that AHC isn't paying what it bloody well owes this town."

Board member Chuck Knight said the town's loss of revenue because of the corporation's unique tax status as a provincial corporation has been substantial.

He said MacKenzie Industrial Park and some private neighborhoods in Thickwood Heights should have been built by private developers, because about $1.3 million would have come in taxes from the industrial park and additional money from Thickwood Heights, where Fort McMurray cannot receive tax money until the corporation sells or leases the land.

As a government corporation, AHC cannot be victimized by land speculators and receives no return on its investment.

In the preliminary budget, the town has estimated revenue from AHC on the same basis as last year, anticipating the existing dispute will be settled in the town's favor. If not, the town could face a shortfall of about $400,000.

Officials of the town about 500 kilometres northeast of Edmonton have been told not to give the government an unbalanced budget but some board members suggested at the meeting an unbalanced budget could force the government to look more closely at problems.

"What if we submit an unbalanced budget and say we have no problem so long as AHC accepts its responsibility and pays a grant in lieu of taxes?" said Knight.

"The way out is to submit a deficit budget and make them (the government) realize they're responsible."

The meeting was told Premier Peter Lougheed should be told the community is getting "only lip service" from Municipal Affairs Minister Dick Johnston and Housing and Public Works Minister Bill Yurko.

One board member, Grant Howell, said the concern over AHC's situation is justified but it is too easy to blame the corporation entirely for the town's problem.

Auto Jack Danger Noted

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration says thousands of hydraulic automobile jacks should be recalled because they could fail, causing serious injuries.

So far, according to NHTSA Administrator Joan Claybrook, there have been six reported injuries, all minor. She issued a consumer advisory today urging owners to stop using the jacks, "especially if work under the vehicle is required."

The agency said three companies already have recalled more than 100,000 of the floor roller jacks and 11 other firms are being urged to do the same thing. The recalls to date involve the the Model 646 hydraulic floor roller jack from Hollywood Accessories, Compton, Calif; Models J-204 and W-1629 jacks from G. I. Joes Inc., Portland, Ore.; and Medallion Model 62-219 from Midland International Corp., Kansas City, Mo.

NHTSA began an investigation of the jacks last July following consumer complaints that a levelling mechanism could fail. The type of jack involved is an "all-steel, wide body chassis, with steel front and rear casters and a single arm levefing mechanism on the right side," NHTSA said. "The jack is rated at 1-½ tons."

It said the following companies are selling jacks which are the same or substantially similar to the ones already recalled:

Allison Corp., Model 9829; K-P Manufacturing Co., Model 2-2150; Chieftain Automotive Products, Model GL-08; Midland International Corp., Medallion Model 62-218; On-Guard Corp. of America, Model FS J387; Wilmar Corp., Model 1629; Universal Tool and Stamping Co, Inc., Model 6300; Foxcraft-Philmont Division, Gulf and Western Manufacturing Co., Foxcraft Model HFJ-30; Stem Distributing Co., Model A3000; Automotive Trading Ltd., Model GE-3000; and Watervliet Tool Co., Model H-1.

"Later models of these manufacturers are not involved in this investigaiton," NHTSA said in a consumer advisory issued Monday.

Ms. Claybrook said she was urging those companies to conduct a voluntary recall "before any more are purchased by consumers, especially in light of the large number of sales anticipated for Father's Dav."

NHTSA said it also is investigating models of jacks marketed by Vornado, Zayre Corp., Schuman Auto Supply, Fred Meyer Co., and others.

Remaining Stamps Due Out June 10

OTTAWA (CP) — The remaining three of four stamps honoring the Canadian International Philatelic Exhibition — CAPEX '78 — will be issued June 10, the post office has announced.

A news release said the first stamp, a 14-cent stamp-on-stamp reproduction of a one-penny Queen Victoria stamp from the mid-19th century, was released in January.

The new 14-cent stamp reproduces a pair of 10-cent blue Jacques Cartier stamps from 1854; a 30-cent stamp shows a pair of half-penny rose Queen Victoria stamps from 1857 and a new $1.25 stamp for registered mail depicts a pair of six-penny slate-violet Prince Albert stamps from 1851, the news release said.

It also said the post office's first souvenir sheet reproducing the three stamps will be issued on one sheet bearing the CAPEX '78 and Universal Postal Union symbols.

A total 33 million 14-cent stamps, 23 million 30-cent stamps and 19 million $1.25 stamps, all designed by Carl Brett of Toronto, will be printed by the British American Bank Note Company.
